Potter,2011-05-12 Food for Apollo by Dorothy

Potter describes and evaluates the growth and scope of cultivated music in Philadelphia from the early eighteenth century to the advent of the Civil War. In many works dealing with American culture, discussion of music's influence is limited to a few significant performances or persons or ignored altogether. The study of music's role in cultural history is fairly recent compared to literature, art, and architecture. Whether vernacular or based on European models, a more thorough understanding of music should include attention to related subjects. This book examines concert and theatre performances, music publishing pre 1861, manufacture of pianos, and British and American literature which promoted music, informing readers about individuals such as Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart whose works and fame generated interest on both sides of the Atlantic. Though initially hindered by the Society of Friends' opposition to entertainments of all sorts, numbers of non-Quakers supported dancing, concerts, and drama by the 1740s; this interest accelerated after the Revolution with the building of some of America's earliest theatres and over time Musical Fund Hall, the Academy of Music, and other venues. Emigrant musicians, notably Alexander Reinagle, introduced new works by contemporary Europeans such as Franz Joseph Haydn, Mozart, C. P. E. Bach, and many others in concerts blended with favorite tunes like the President's March. Later in the nineteenth century, Philadelphia's noted African American composer and band leader Francis Johnson continued the tradition of mixing classical and vernacular works in his popular promenade concerts. As they advertised and shipped their music to an ever-growing market, post-Revolutionary emigrant music publishers including Benjamin Carr and his family, George Willig, and George Blake created successful businesses that influenced American taste far beyond Philadelphia.

Fires Forever Burning Paul Hookham, 2016-01-15 Rachel Fischer looked out at the Essex marshlands as her train sped towards London's Fenchurch Street station on a hot summer's morning in 1966. She was expecting just another uneventful day at the Polish Embassy where she worked part-time as a translator. She thought about her parents, Izaak and Rebekah, who she'd last seen on the day before the Krakow ghetto was liquidated by the Nazis in 1943. She had no idea what happened to them and feared the worst. Her search for the truth had proved elusive until now. She never spotted the man who jumped on the train out of the shadows at the last minute. He sat patiently in one carriage back, awaiting his moment as the final steps of his master plan were being played out. It would certainly not be just another day at the office, and by the end of it, lives would change forever.
