Bickerton, Carlo Invernizzi Accetti, 2021 Contemporary democracies face a crisis of political representation In understanding this crisis scholars and commentators often frame it as the end or the collapse of democracy This book takes a very different path It argues that we are witnessing a transformation in the nature and practice of political competition within existing democratic regimes This transformation consists in the rise of a new political field techno populism Within this field appeals to the people and appeals to expertise are the new structuring logic of democratic politics Populist appeals to a unitary people combine in multiple ways with technocratic claims about efficient policy making and policy implementation These multiple combinations form the basis for the varieties of techno populism outlined in detail in this book We focus in particular on British French and Italian cases The concept of technopopulism helps us to make sense of new and idiosyncratic political movements such as En Marche and the Five Star Movement Technopopulism is also the conceptual key to understanding the significance of Blairism for British politics and its legacy in the profound transformations underway in the contemporary Conservative Party The transition from an ideological struggle between left and right to this technopopulist political field where populist and technocratic appeals are fused together into novel forms of political organization is having a significant impact on the quality of democratic political competition This book analyses the origins and consequences of the rise of technopopulism as well as considering the remedies available to us to tackle its negative effects Making Common Sense Wilfred H.
