Rising Life Expectancy A Global History:

Rising Life Expectancy James C. Riley, 2001-06-04 Between 1800 and 2000 life expectancy at birth rose from about 30 years to a global average of 67 years and to more than 75 years in favored countries This dramatic change was called a health transition characterized by a transition both in how long people expected to live and how they expected to die Rising Life Expectancy examines the way humans reduced risks to their survival both regionally and globally to promote world population growth and population aging

A Global History of Medicine Mark Jackson, 2018-01-05 In recent decades there has been considerable interest in writing histories of medicine that capture local regional and global dimensions of health and health care in the same frame Exploring changing patterns of disease and different systems of medicine across continents and countries A Global History of Medicine provides a rich introduction to this emergent field The introductory chapter addresses the challenges of writing the history of medicine across space and time and suggests ways in which tracing the entangled histories of the patchworks of practice that have constituted medicine allow us to understand how healing traditions are always plural permeable and shaped by power and privilege Written by scholars from around the world and accompanied by suggestions for further reading individual chapters explore historical developments in health medicine and disease in China the Islamic World North and Latin America Africa South east Asia Western and Eastern Europe and Australia and New Zealand The final chapter focuses on smallpox eradication and reflects on the sources and methods necessary to integrate local and global dimensions of medicine more effectively Collectively the contributions to A Global History of Medicine will not only be invaluable to undergraduate and postgraduate students seeking to expand their knowledge of health and medicine across time but will also provide a constructive theoretical and empirical platform for future scholarship

Ageless Nation Michael G. Zey, 2017-07-05 In this intriguing volume futurist and author Michael G Zey imagines a time in which technology has stretched human life spans to four hundred years or more Genetic engineering cloning and stem cell technology will eradicate diseases and allow for nanoscopic repair and maintenance of the body Smart drugs and caloric restriction programs will largely stop aging and ensure healthy bodies and sharp minds indefinitely Grounding his speculation in contemporary scientific research Zey's optimistic vision sees retirement replaced by hiatuses between careers and leisure time spent in multi generational homes Key players in the debate include supporters like Cambridge University scientist Aubrey de Grey who envisions five thousand year life spans and the radical futurist author Ray Kurzweil who foresees the merging of humans and computers Organizations such as the Coalition to Extend Life lobby the government for immortality research funding and find opposition in the President's Council on Bioethics and deep ecologists advocating zero population growth Criticizing current environmental trends as anti progress and anti human Zey's own solutions include controversial measures like human control of weather colonization of outer space and genetically modifying food He concludes that the eventuality of a modern Fountain of Youth is closer than we think Zey's predictions about the future are thoughtful and fascinating

The Human Web John Robert McNeill, William Hardy McNeill, 2003 Why did the first civilizations emerge when and where they did How did Islam become a unifying force in the world of its birth What enabled the West to project its goods and power around the world from the fifteenth century on Why was agriculture invented seven times and the steam engine just once World historical questions such as these the subjects of major works by Jared Diamond David Landes and others are now of great moment as global frictions increase In a spirited and original contribution to this quickening discussion two renowned historians father and son explore the webs that have drawn humans together in patterns of interaction and exchange cooperation and competition since earliest times Whether small or large loose or dense these webs have provided the medium for the movement of ideas goods power and money within and across cultures societies and nations From the thin localized webs that characterized agricultural communities twelve thousand years ago through the denser more interactive metropolitan webs that surrounded ancient Sumer Athens and Timbuktu to the electrified global web that today envelops virtually the entire world in a maelstrom of cooperation and competition J R McNeill and William H McNeill show human webs to be a key component of world history and a revealing framework of analysis Avoiding any determinism environmental or cultural the McNeills give us a synthesizing picture of the big patterns of world history in a rich open ended concise account
