Rock Fences Of The Bluegrass:

Rock Fences of the Bluegrass Carolyn Murray-Wooley, Karl Raitz, 1992-05-19 Gray rock fences built of ancient limestone are hallmarks of Kentucky's Bluegrass landscape. Why did Kentucky farmers turn to rock as fence building material when most had earlier used hardwood rails? Who were the masons responsible for Kentucky's lovely rock fences and what are the different rock forms used in this region? In this generously illustrated book Carolyn Murray Wooley and Karl Raitz address those questions and explore the background of Kentucky's rock fences, the talent and skill of the fence masons and the Irish and Scottish models they followed in their work. They also correct inaccurate popular perceptions about the fences and use census data and archival documents to identify the fence masons and where they worked. As the book reveals, the earliest settlers in Kentucky built dry laid fences around eighteenth century farmsteads, cemeteries and mills. Fence building increased dramatically during the nineteenth century so that by the 1880s rock fences lined most roads, bounded pastures and farmyards throughout the Bluegrass. Farmers also built or commissioned rock fences in New England, the Nashville Basin and the Texas hill country, but the Bluegrass may have had the most extensive collection of quarried rock fences in North America. This is the first book length study on any American fence type. Filled with detailed fence descriptions, an extensive list of masons' names, drawings, photographs and a helpful glossary, it will appeal to folklorists, historians, geographers, architects, landscape architects and masons as well as general readers intrigued by Kentucky's rock fences.

interdependent using examples from across Europe and America Looking at the land forms of southern England for instance he comments on the use of hedgerows to divide fields the mineral or geomorphological features of the land determining where hedgerows will grow in service of the human animal s needs Hart reveals the impact on the land of human culture and the basic imperative of making a living as well as the evolution of technical skills toward that end as seen in the advance of barbed wire as a function of modern transportation Hart describes with equal clarity the erosion of land to form river basins and the workings of a coal mine He charts shifting patterns of crop rotation from the medieval rota of food wheat or rye feed barley or oats and fallow to restore the land to modern two crop cycle of corn and soybeans made possible by fertilizers and pesticides He comments on traditions of land division it is almost impossible to find a straight line on a map of Europe and inventories a variety of farm structures from hop yards and oast houses to the use of dikes for irrigation He identifies the relict features of the landscape from low earthen terraces once used in the southern United States to prevent erosion to old bank buildings that have become taverns and barns turned into human homes Carrying the story of the rural landscape into our frantic era he describes the bow wavewhere city life meets rural agriculture and plots the effect of recreation and its structures on the look of the land Encyclopedia of American Folklife Simon J Bronner,2015-03-04
