

Rocks

What Are Rocks?

Rocks are solid materials formed from crystals of one or more minerals. The Earth's crust is made up of many different types of rock.

What Are Different Types of Rock?

There are three main types of rock: igneous, sedimentary, and metamorphic. Each type is formed in a different way.

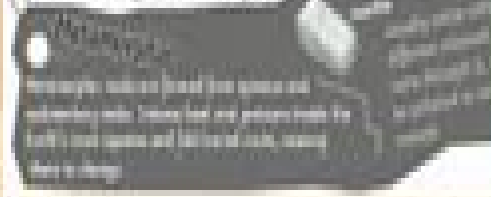

Sedimentary

Sedimentary rocks are formed when other rocks are broken down by wind and water. These rocks are then carried by rivers and oceans to the bottom of seas or oceans. Over millions of years, the sediment is buried and compressed. Over time, the pressure causes the sediment to turn into rock. These sedimentary rocks are formed from the remains of dead animals or plants.

Sedimentary rocks are often found in layers. They can be made of sand, silt, and clay. They can also be made of the remains of dead animals or plants.

What Are Rocks?

Rocks are solid materials formed from crystals of one or more minerals. The Earth's crust is made up of many different types of rock.

What Are Igneous?

Igneous rocks are the primary means of earth and minerals that solidify from molten material. They can include minerals that are formed from molten material. They can also be formed from molten material that has been changed by heat and pressure.

How Are Igneous Formed?

Igneous rocks are formed through a process called crystallization. When a liquid (magma) cools, the minerals in it solidify. The minerals that form first are called primary minerals. The minerals that form last are called secondary minerals. The minerals that form in the middle are called tertiary minerals.
