Genetic Variation and Nutrition A. P. Simopoulos,B. Childs,1990-06-20 Evolutionary Aspects of Nutrition and Health A. P. Simopoulos,Berthold Koletzko,1999-07 The issues treated in this publication are brought together in this way for the first time For many of the chronic diseases familial predispositions are well established and there is good evidence for true genetic predisposition When Homo erectus emerged 1 7 million years ago humans existed as non cereal eating hunter gatherers It is on this basis that according to the hypothesis of the carnivore connection an insulin resistant genotype evolved to provide survival and reproductive advantages to populations adapted to a high meat low plant food low carbohydrate nutritional environment Cereal became the major source of calories and protein in the human diet only about 10 000 years ago Humankind has thus had little evolutionary experience to adapt to this new food type maladaptation being the consequence Moreover studies comparing energy expenditure in Western societies and during the Paleolithic period indicate a low level of physical activity not previously encountered in human history a state to which humans are not genetically adapted Together with the dietary changes this has led to a modern environment in which a number of individuals are prone to chronic diseases causing increases in non insulin dependent diabetes mellitus hypertension coronary artery disease cancer and obesity As a consequence the lifestyle approach for the prevention and management of these diseases is essential varying with national dietary patterns and national economy This publication will be of special interest to physicians geneticists nutritionists dieticians anthropologists food technologists food policy makers and individuals interested in

Ramos-Lopez, Claudia Ojeda-Granados, 2024-07-02 Human populations that have recently undergone substantial changes in their traditional social cultural and dietary habits have shown an increased susceptibility to developing chronic diet related diseases concerning their genetic background One factor is that the population's adaptive genetic variants related to its evolutionary history are exposed to different physical and lifestyle environments that underlie and influence the current patterns of disease risk Under this perspective the current obesogenic environment has promoted the acculturation of a westernized diet disrupting the ancestral gene foods nutrients bioactive compounds interactions i.e. ancestral genetic ethnic profile vs modern lifestyle Modern lifestyles including unhealthy dietary patterns have further impaired the consumption of staple foods with essential nutrients and functional properties increasing the incidence of obesity and associated comorbidities However most conventional nutrition approaches targeting chronic diseases have limited impact on managing the leading non communicable diseases affecting modern societies
