Protecting Aboriginal Children:

Protecting Aboriginal Children Chris Walmsley, 2011-11-01 Beginning in the 1960s large numbers of Aboriginal children in Canada were removed from their families by provincial child welfare services. Known as the sixties scoop, the practice caused great harm to individuals and families and devastated communities. Today Aboriginal children comprise roughly half the children in state care but since the 1980s bands and tribal councils have developed unique community based child welfare services to better protect Aboriginal children. Protecting Aboriginal Children explores contemporary approaches to the protection of Aboriginal children through interviews with practising social workers employed at Aboriginal child welfare organizations and the child protection service in British Columbia. It places current practice in a sociohistorical context, describes emerging practice in decolonizing communities and identifies the effects of political and media controversy on social workers. This is the first book to document emerging practice in Aboriginal communities and describe child protection practice simultaneously from the point of view of the Aboriginal and non Aboriginal social worker. Those working in child welfare or contemplating a career in child protection will find the book an insightful analysis of current practice, thinking and experience. Aboriginal peoples with an interest in health and human services as well as social work students, child welfare workers and administrators and health education and human service professionals will find it particularly useful.

Aboriginal Child Welfare, Self-government and the Rights of Indigenous Children Sonia Harris-Short, 2012 This volume addresses the contentious and topical issue of aboriginal self government over child welfare. Using case studies from Australia and Canada it discusses aboriginal child welfare in historical and comparative perspectives and critically examines recent legal reforms and changes in the design, management and delivery of child welfare services aimed at securing the decolonization of aboriginal children and families. Within this context the author identifies the limitations of reconciling the conflicting demands of self determination and sovereignty and suggests that international law can provide more nuanced and culturally sensitive solutions. Referring to the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child it is argued that the effective decolonization of aboriginal child welfare requires a journey well beyond the single issue of child welfare to the heart of the debate over self government, self determination and sovereignty in both national and international law.

Protecting Aboriginal Children Christopher Walmsley, 2023 Decolonising Indigenous Child Welfare Terri Libesman, 2013-12-04 During the past decade a remarkable transference of responsibility to Indigenous children's organisation has taken place in many parts of Australia, Canada, the USA and New Zealand. It has been influenced by Indigenous peoples' human rights advocacy at national and international levels by claims to self determination and by the globalisation of Indigenous children's organisations. Thus far this reform has taken place with little attention from academic and non Indigenous communities. Now Decolonising Indigenous Child Welfare: Comparative Perspectives considers these developments and evaluating law reform with respect to Indigenous child welfare asks whether the pluralisation of responses to their welfare and well being within a cross cultural post colonial context can improve the lives of Indigenous children The legislative frameworks for the delivery of child welfare services to Indigenous children are assessed in terms of the degree of self determination which they afford Indigenous communities The book draws upon interdisciplinary research and the author s experience collaborating with the peak Australian Indigenous children s organisation for over a decade to provide a thorough examination of this international issue Dr Terri Libesman is a Senior Lecturer in the Law Faculty at the University of Technology Sydney She has collaborated researched and published for over a decade with the peak Australian Indigenous children s organisation
