Protecting Human Subjects Departmental Subject Pools And Institutional Review Boards:

Protecting Human Subjects Garvin D. Chastain, R. Eric Landrum, 1999-01-01 Examines the critical issues and processes related to the protection of human subjects who participate in research The topic is approached with an interest in the empirical research that has been done to study the effects of the practice of research From the standpoint of metacognition this is a volume about the research done on the effects of conducting research The two primary mechanisms that govern the processes of conducting human subjects research are the departmental subject pool on the local level and the Institutional Review Board IRB on the institutional level The goal of this volume is to examine two trends that emerge after review of the literature namely that a the IRB process has been studied more frequently than the subject pool process and b neither area has had much empirical research conducted covering its operations Handbook for Conducting Research on Human Sexuality Michael W. Wiederman, Bernard E. Whitley, Jr., 2012-12-06 Human sexuality researchers often find themselves faced with questions that entail conceptual methodological or ethical issues for which their professional training or prior experience may not have prepared them The goal of this handbook is to provide that guidance to students and professionals interested in the empirical study of human sexuality from behavioral and social scientific perspectives It provides practical and concrete advice about conducting human sexuality research and addresses issues inherent to both general social scientific and specific human sexuality research This comprehensive resource offers a unique multidisciplinary examination of the specific methodological issues inherent in conducting human sexuality research The methodological techniques and advances that are familiar to researchers trained in one discipline are often unfamiliar to researchers from other disciplines This book is intended to help enrich the communication between the various disciplines involved in human sexuality research Each of the 21 self standing chapters provides an expert overview of a particular area of research methodology from a variety of academic disciplines It addresses those issues unique to human sexuality research such as how to measure sexuality variables how to design studies recruit participants and collect data how to consider cultural and ethical issues and how to perform and interpret statistical analyses This book is intended as a reference tool for researchers and students interested in human sexuality from a variety of disciplines including psychology sociology family science health communication nursing medicine and anthropology Ethical Issues in Behavioral Research Allan J. Kimmel, 2009-02-04 With concerns rising over the ethical dimensions of behavioral research and the developments in ethical codification and the research review process Ethical Issues in Behavioral Research looks at the research community's response to the ethical challenges that arise in the application of research approaches Focuses on ethical and legal aspects of participant research on the internet Presents a practical framework for ethical decision making Discusses the revised ethical principles and code of conduct of the American Psychological Association A new chapter detailing ethical issues in marketing and opinion research including a contrast of market and academic research and a summary of the author's research comparing ethical
