Enterprises, Industry

and Innovation in the People's Republic of China Alberto Gabriele, 2020-04-06 This book analyses and critically evaluates the development of two key components of China's economy: the network of productive enterprises and the national innovation system from the inception of market oriented reforms to the present day. The approach is a partly novel one, albeit inspired by classical political economy rooted in the structure and evolution of social relations of production and exchange and of the institutional setting in these two crucial domains. The main findings are twofold. First, the role of planning and public ownership far from withering has been upheld and qualitatively enhanced, especially throughout the most recent stages of industrial reforms. Second, enterprises are increasingly participating along with universities and research centers in a concerted and historically unparalleled effort to dramatically upgrade China's capacity to engage in indigenous innovation. As a result, China's National Innovation System has been growing and strengthening at a pace much faster than that of the national economy as a whole. The book also presents a speculative and provisional perspective on the validity and meaning of the claim that the country's socioeconomic system is indeed a form of socialism with Chinese characteristics. It will be of interest to students and scholars researching China's politics and development economics.

Regional Innovation Systems

Philip N. Cooke, Martin Heidenreich, Hans-Joachim Braczyk, 2004 Since the first edition of this book in 1995, there has been a worldwide innovation-led economic boom and a subsequent slump, meaning enormous change has also occurred at the level of regional economies. The new edition registers this change and provides an interesting test of the robustness of the original arguments in the book. Not least, more industrial policy making is influenced by the RIS analysis, and many national and regional governments have adopted RIS approaches along with related instruments like promotion of industry clusters, academic entrepreneurship, regional venture capital, and science-led development strategies.
