Alloys Marin R. Sullivan,2022-03-01 A new look at the interrelationship of architecture and sculpture during one of the richest periods of American modern design Alloys looks at a unique period of synergy and exchange in the postwar United States when sculpture profoundly shaped architecture and vice versa Leading architects such as Gordon Bunshaft and Eero Saarinen turned to sculptors including Harry Bertoia Alexander Calder Richard Lippold and Isamu Noguchi to produce site determined large scale sculptures tailored for their buildings highly visible and well traversed threshold spaces The parameters of these spaces atriums lobbies plazas and entryways led to various designs like sculptural walls ceilings and screens that not only embraced new industrial materials and processes but also demonstrated art's ability to merge with lived architectural spaces Marin Sullivan argues that these sculptural commissions represent an alternate history of midcentury American art Rather than singular masterworks by lone geniuses some of the era's most notable spaces Philip Johnson's Four Seasons Restaurant in Mies van der Rohe's Seagram Building Max Abramovitz's Philharmonic Hall at Lincoln Center and Pietro Belluschi and Walter Gropius's Pan Am Building would be diminished without the collaborative efforts of architects and artists At the same time the artistic creations within these spaces could not exist anywhere else Sullivan shows that the principle of synergy provides an ideal framework to assess this pronounced relationship between sculpture and architecture She also explores the afterlives of these postwar commissions in the decades since their construction A fresh consideration of sculpture's relationship to architectural design and functionality following World War II Alloys highlights the affinities between the two fields and the ways their connections remain with us today

Walker, 2001-04-02. Those people in uniforms who ring bells and raise money for the poor during the holiday season belong to a religious movement that in 1865 combined early feminism, street preaching, holiness theology and intentionally outrageous singing into what soon became the Salvation Army. In Pulling the Devil's Kingdom Down, Pamela Walker emphasizes how thoroughly the Army entered into nineteenth-century urban life. She follows the movement from its Methodist roots and East London origins through its struggles with the established denominations of England, problems with the law and the media, and public manifestations that included street brawls with working class toughs The Salvation Army was a neighborhood religion with a battle plan especially suited to urban working class geography and cultural life The ability to use popular leisure activities as inspiration was a major factor in the Army's success since pubs music halls sports and betting were regarded as its principal rivals Salvationist women claimed the right to preach and enjoyed spiritual authority and public visibility more extensively than in virtually any other religious or secular organization Opposition to the new movement was equally energetic and took many forms but even as contemporary music hall performers ridiculed the Hallelujah Lasses the Salvation Army was spreading across Great Britain and the Continent and on to North America The Army offered a distinctive response to the dilemmas facing Victorian Christians in particular the relationship between what Salvationists believed and the work they did Walker fills in the social cultural and religious contexts that make that relationship come to life
