Resources Control:

Quality-of-service Aware Resource Control in Networked Computing Systems Dimitrios Tsamis, 2011 The emerging trends in computing have increasingly had a network centric focus Networked services offered through cloud computing paradigms have replaced applications that would traditionally run on local machines In addition the growing usage of applications such as social networking and platforms such as smartphones has resulted in greater need for ubiquitous network access The consequent heightened demand for networked computing warrants efficient utilization of the limited network resources and more intelligent resource control algorithms with a focus on providing an enhanced user experience This thesis examines quality of service aware resource control for both wireless and wired networks The first part of the thesis focuses on smartphones which have become the de facto mobile computing platform A smartphone typically has access to multiple types of wireless networks such as cellular networks and WiFi Moreover the functionality of smartphones can be expanded by installing applications These two core characteristics of smartphones also reveal their most significant limitations lower available bandwidth and limited computing power Both of these limitations are addressed in this thesis Available bandwidth on wireless networks fluctuates over time and is also shared among all users connecting to the same base station In this work we present a dynamic bandwidth prediction model that makes short term predictions on the evolution of bandwidth The model is dynamic and adjusts to the latest measurements provided by Zeus a bandwidth measurement tool we designed and implemented on Nokia phones The bandwidth predictions of our model are utilized in a novel rate control scheme which we demonstrate to offer better performance than existing schemes We next investigate the computing limitations of smartphones A novel framework is considered where computational tasks may be transferred to a central server and the results are fetched back at a later time The central server has ample computing resources compared to the smartphones and the computing speedup outweighs the communication delays The goal is to minimize the latency experienced by computational tasks while judiciously utilizing the scarce memory resources available at the smartphone Given the fluctuating nature of wireless bandwidth there is a tradeoff between limited connectivity and congestion at the mobile The second part of this thesis investigates resource control issues in wireline computing and more specifically in packet switches Packet switches are essential parts of the Internet backbone and are also present in every data center Modern data centers are severely constrained by their power consumption and power saving schemes would enable their further expansion We propose novel power aware scheduling algorithms for switches that offer significant power savings while sacrificing minimal performance Finally we examine a novel scalable two stage ingress memory switch architecture and we add backlog awareness to the scheduling algorithm to improve performance and fairness as perceived by the user

Russell,1999-07-08 The introduction of Christianity into traditional societies has been the subject of numerous studies Few of these studies however have adequately examined the way that this introduction affects power relationships in a community In this the third volume in the American Society of Missiology s dissertation series A Sue Russell attempts to advance the discourse on Christianity and social change by showing how a new social institution the local church both influences and is influenced by existing sociocultural power relationships Building on her extensive research into the Tagal Murut Dr Russell clearly demonstrates that the introduction of Christianity created a dynamic that produced new social relations and power structures in Tagal society With its unique insights into this crucial dynamic Conversion Identity and Power stands as an important contribution to the sociological and missiological literature exploring the impact of Christianity on traditional societies Book jacket Final Environmental Impact Statement United States. Ashley,Zachary Alden Smith,1999-01-01 One of the greatest conundrums facing the arid western United States is the availability use and quality of groundwater In large sections of the West groundwater is the only dependable source of water for agricultural production and home consumption Yet many of the aquifers are being depleted at a rate that will suck them dry within a century Furthermore dependence upon groundwater in many areas will only increase in the future This dependence is already having serious consequences for small towns on the Great Plains Faced with growing costs associated with deeper wells and the need for ever more advanced technology for extracting water these towns find they lack the resources to maintain current agricultural practices In this timely assessment of the West s groundwater resources the authors provide a detailed overview of groundwater management in the Western states The authors present for each state the various management strategies laws and political realities that have made groundwater appropriation such a volatile subject They also suggest possible difficulties that states and regions might face under current groundwater policies By examining separate cases and viewing the West as a whole the authors are able to identify not only the most pressing problems but also the most appropriate management techniques for protecting water supplies for future use European Robotics Symposium 2008 Herman Bruyninckx,Libor Preucil,Miroslav Kulich,2008-02-12 At the dawn of the new millennium robotics is undergoing a major transformation in scope and dimension From a largely dominant industrial focus robotics is rapidly expanding into the challenges of unstructured environments Interacting with assisting serving and exploring with humans the emerging robots will increasingly touch people and their lives The goal of the Springer Tracts in Advanced Robotics STAR series is to bring in a timely fashion the latest advances and developments in robotics on the basis of their significance and quality It is our hope that the wider dissemination of research developments will stimulate more exchanges and collaborations among the research community and contribute to further advancement of this rapidly growing field The European Robotics Symposium EUROS was launched in 2006 as an international scientific single track event promoted by EURON the European Robotics Network linking most of the European research teams since its inception in 2000 Since then EUROS has found its parental home under STAR together with the other thematic symposia devoted to excellence in robotics research FSR ISER ISRR WAFR
