Responses To Governance Governing Corporations Societies And The World:

Responses to Governance John C. Dixon, 2003-04-30 Dixon and his colleagues provide a behaviorist perspective on governance. Their concern is with the governed's responses to those who seek to govern them: their governors and the counter responses that they induce from the governors. They take as axiomatic that the governed are not a homogenized and amorphous mass in the them/us dichotomy reduced to what Carlyle called a dead logic formula; thereby, for the purpose of this analysis, leave begging all the relevant questions. The governed are not a disembodied abstraction; they are an aggregate of men and women of flesh and blood. In a corporation, they are corporate directors whose governors are those who own or perhaps have a stake in that corporation; corporate managers whose governors are the corporate directors; corporate employees whose governors are the corporate managers. In a society, they are individuals or groups of individuals, perhaps in corporations located within its jurisdiction whose governors are the members of societal political and administrative elites. At the global level, they are individuals or groups of individuals in countries and corporations within the jurisdiction of international governmental organizations and international regimes whose governors are those who seek to control those global governance mechanisms. Whether the governed's response to their governors' processes is one of compliance or antagonism, and how the governors' response to any antagonism has implications for governance capacity, good governance, and governability. A provocative study that will be of interest to students and scholars of political theory, international relations, and management and organizational theory, as well as those who are concerned with issues of governance at all levels: corporate, societal, and global.
