Rethinking The Trauma Of War:

Rethinking the Trauma of War Patrick J. Bracken, Celia Petty, 1998 This text examines the emerging concerns about the export of trauma experts and counsellors to war torn areas of the world The contributors are all professionals who are involved in helping adults and children rebuild their lives after witnessing the destruction of their families and communities Based on their own experience of working internationally this book presents an analysis of present misconceived attempts to give help but also an agenda for future more appropriate ways of responding to those affected by wars and conflicts War and Rape Nicola Henry, 2012-07-26 Wartime rape has been virulent in wars of sovereignty territory conquest religion ideology and liberation yet attention to this crime has been sporadic throughout history Rape remains unspeakable particularly within law Moreover rape has not featured prominently in post conflict collective memory And even when rape is remembered it is often the subject of political controversy and heated debate In this book Henry asks some critical questions about the relationship between mass rape politics and law In what ways does law contribute to the collective memory of wartime rape How do counter memories of victims compete with the denialism of wartime rape The text specifically analyses the historical silencing of rape throughout international legal history and the potential of law to restore these silenced histories it also examines the violence of law and the obstacles to individual and collective redemption Tracing the prosecution of rape crimes within contemporary courts Henry seeks to argue that politics underscores the way rape is dealt with by the international community in the aftermath of armed conflict Providing a comprehensive overview of the politics of wartime rape and the politics of prosecuting such crimes within international humanitarian law this text will be of great interest to scholars of gender and security war crimes and law and society The Practice of War Aparna Rao, Michael Bollig, Monika Böck, 2008-03-01 The fact is that war comes in many guises and its effects continue to be felt long after peace is proclaimed This challenges the anthropologists who write of war as participant observers Participant observation inevitably deals with the here and now with the highly specific It is only over the long view that one can begin to see the commonalities that emerge from the different forms of conflict and can begin to generalize From the Introduction More needs to be understood about the ways of war and its effects What implications does war have for people their lived in communities and larger political systems how do they cope and adjust in war situations and how do they deal with the changed world that they inhabit once peace is declared Through a series of essays that move from looking at the nature of violence to the peace processes that follow it this important book provides some answers to these questions It also analyzes those new dimensions of social interaction such as the internet which now provide a bridge between local concerns and global networks and are fundamentally altering the practices of war One Nation Under Therapy Christina Hoff Sommers, Sally Satel, 2025-08-22 Americans have traditionally placed great value on self reliance and fortitude In recent decades however we have seen the rise of a therapeutic ethic that views Americans as emotionally underdeveloped psychically frail and requiring the ministrations of mental health professionals to cope with life's vicissitudes. Being in touch with one's feelings and freely expressing them have become paramount personal virtues. Today with a book for every ailment, a counselor for every crisis, a lawsuit for every grievance and a TV show for every conceivable problem, we are at risk of degrading our native ability to cope with life's challenges. Drawing on established science and common sense, Christina Hoff Sommers and Dr. Sally Satel reveal how therapism and the burgeoning trauma industry have come to pervade our lives. Help is offered everywhere under the presumption that we need it: in children's classrooms, the workplace, churches, courtrooms, the media, the military. But with all the help comes a host of troubling consequences, including the myth of stressed-out homework-burdened hypercompetitive and depressed or suicidal schoolchildren in need of therapy and medication; the loss of moral bearings in our approach to lying, crime, addiction, and other foibles and vices; the unasked-for grief counselors who descend on bereaved families, schools, and communities following a tragedy, offering dubious advice while billing plenty of money; the expansion of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder from an affliction of war veterans to nearly everyone who has experienced a setback. Intelligent, provocative, and wryly amusing, One Nation Under Therapy demonstrates that talking about problems is no substitute for confronting them.

Jobs After War Eugenia Date-Bah, 2003. This publication examines the critical role of employment in post-conflict reconstruction and considers effective practical approaches to help achieve sustainable peace building. It contains papers and country case studies which provide a broad picture of the key issues involved, including the nature of the labour market and other features of the post-conflict situation, the diversity of crisis-affected groups and their specific concerns, such as youth, women, refugees, internally displaced people, and ex-combatants; skills training, local economic development, micro-finance, labour-intensive infrastructure rebuilding, social protection, the roles of the private sector, co-operatives, workers and employers associations, labour administration, and international organisations.

Diplomatic Interventions K. Fierke, 2005-04-22. Diplomatic Interventions argues that war is a social construction. In so doing, it unsettles the definition of intervention as a coercive interference by one state in the affairs of another, to examine the range of communicative or diplomatic practices which through their presence modify the experience of war. The tension between claims that war is pervasive and that war is a social construct is analysed in relation to a range of moral, legal, military, economic, cultural, and therapeutic interventions. The concluding chapter highlights how the book itself is a critical intervention that requires us to look at again from a new angle at international practice.

Healing the Wounds of Gukurahundi in Zimbabwe Dumisani Ngwenya, 2017-12-14. This book is based on a participatory action research project carried out with a group of former Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZPRA) which was the armed wing of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) which was led by the late Joshua Nkomo. ZPRA was the primary target of Gukurahundi, a pogrom by the Mugabe government which left an estimated 20,000 civilians dead and countless others tortured in the early 1980s in Matabeleland, Zimbabwe. It has been almost 30 years since the violence ended, but there has never been an official healing and reconciliation programme or truth commission into the atrocities The government chose the path of amnesia by granting a blanket amnesty to all involved The regime has enforced a culture of silence over the event through repression and intimidation The book is a culmination of a two year journey by the group and the author of an exploration of group based self healing approaches to the pain caused by the violence of Gukurahundi

Global Perspectives on War, Gender and Health Hannah Bradby, 2016-04-22 Rendering the suffering of the marginalized visible has been an important aspect of feminist sociological studies of health illness and medicine with the subjective experience of those without access to institutional power being at the forefront of the research This volume analyzes the links between the suffering caused by the intentional violence of war and the unintentional suffering engendered by modern medicinal processes By establishing a fitting tribute to the academic and campaigning work of Meg Stacey Global Perspectives on War Gender and Health responds to her challenge of why medical sociology had not yet turned its gaze upon the health consequences of war A selection of international case studies are used to create a volume of significant interest to sociologists and those working in the fields of anthropology social policy social work peace war and security studies and international development

Psychotherapy and Culture Zack Eleftheriadou, 2018-05-08 this book focuses on cross cultural relationships and examines how culture and racial factors manifest in the clinical setting It discusses on how to work with both cross cultural differentiation and integration
