Magnetic North Canadian Steam In Twilight:

Magnetic North Roger Cook, Karl Zimmermann, 1999 Magnetic North is an inspiring chronicle of the brief bright moment when steam locomotives ran their final miles in Eastern Canada a time when the certainty of their demise made their presence all the sweeter From the moment Karl Zimmermann and Roger Cook packed their bags in May of 1958 and boarded a sleeper for Montreal they were hooked on Canadian steam They arrived just in time to see and record the end of an era In a sense Zimmermann and Cook have been collaborating on this book for 40 years In carefully wrought essays and in photographs selected from among many hundreds made by the authors and other outstanding railway photographers this book is a vision of classic steam railroading rendered with first person immediacy Excerpt from Magnetic North With armstrong turntable bucket coaling station and two stall enginehouse La Malbaie reeked of small time steam powered style it was the epitome of old fashioned railroading still rich in humanity It was labor intensive to a fault with stations sprouting train order boards and inside the operators or station agents to set them and engine terminals where locomotives sometimes were turned by men with strong backs and strong arms and sometimes were fueled using derricks to wrestle hulking buckets to tender top If labor intensive it was also irresistible

Arctic Twilight Leonard Budgell, 2009-01-27 Leonard Budgell saw the Canadian North like nobody else He put his observations into words as few others ever could As a Servant of the Bay Budgell ran Hudson's Bay Company trading posts for decades in isolated communities up the Labrador coast and across the Arctic. Living among aboriginal Canadians he witnessed episodes and heard stories that would never again be repeated except he wrote them down. His pen memorably portrays everything from dancing northern lights and hunting practices of birds to astonishing human adventures and predicaments. Northern ways intact for centuries changed with rifles and motorboats, radios and electric generators, new foods and different medicines. Most often it was Budgell who bridged the aboriginal and southern cultures, building and operating remote radio stations at places like Hebron, taking an RCMP officer into a settlement where a choice had to be made between two different codes of law and behaviour in a murder case. In Arctic Twilight Budgell chronicles in an outpouring of letters to a much younger female friend a traditional way of life that was changing forever. Claudia Coutu Radmore, a teacher, writer and artist, first met Len Budgell in Winnipeg when she was a fine arts student and he had retired from the Company. Their friendship grew stronger when he began writing remarkable letters after she returned to Queen's University. Now edited and organized by her, this unique memoir is available to the public for the first time.
