

THE MYSTERY OF THE EYE AND THE SHADOW OF BLINDNESS

Blindness is commonly considered to be a physical condition with negative consequences for those affected. Most research and treatment begin with the assumption that blind persons require adjustment and training to cope with their distorted view of reality. For Rod Michalko, blindness offers a legitimate way of being and a teaching tool – one that presents a unique perspective on aspects of the world that the sighted never experience and that the disciplines of ophthalmology and rehabilitation never consider.

This book explores matters of choice and personal fulfilment in the context of blindness. Ophthalmology and rehabilitation use sheer necessity as their guiding principle, but the blind person must grapple with the question of what kind of blind person he or she chooses to be. The story of blindness is retold in the life of every blind person and whenever blindness is thought about, spoken of, or acted upon. Michalko immerses himself in this multiplicity of narration, weaving his own experience of blindness through it, using it as an occasion to think about life, our decisions, our choices, including how we choose to understand each other, and the ways we choose to live collectively in the human community. He wants readers to consider what can be produced by thinking of blindness as an essential part of being.

This is an important book for anyone who has personal or professional contact with any community of disabled persons, particularly the blind, as well as anyone who simply wants to better understand what it means to be human.

ROD MICHALKO is Adjunct Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Saint Francis Xavier University. Until recently he was a senior trainer at the Management Board Secretariat for the Ontario government.

The Teacher's Body Diane P. Freedman, Martha Stoddard Holmes, 2012-02-01 These highly personal essays from a range of academic settings explore the palpable moments of discomfort disempowerment and or enlightenment that emerge when we discard the fiction that the teacher has no body Visible and or invisible the body can transform both the teacher's experience and classroom dynamics. When students think the teacher's body is clearly marked by ethnicity, race, disability, size, gender, sexuality, illness, age, pregnancy, class, linguistic and geographic origins or some combination of these, both the mode and the content of education can change. Other, less visible aspects of a teacher's body, such as depression or a history of sexual assault, can have an equally powerful impact on how we teach and learn. The collection anatomizes these moments of embodied pedagogy as unexpected teaching opportunities and examines their apparent impact on teacher-student educational dynamics of power, authority, desire, friendship, open-mindedness and resistance.

Dramatizing Blindness Devon Healey, 2021-08-31. Dramatizing Blindness: Disability Studies as Critical Creative Narrative engages with the cultural meanings and movements of blindness. This book addresses how blindness is lived in particular contexts: in offices of ophthalmology and psychiatry, in classrooms of higher education, in accessibility service offices on the street and at home. Taking the form of a play written in five acts, the narrative dramatizes how the main character's blindness is conceived of in the world and in the self. Each act includes an analysis where blind studies is explored in relation to disability studies. This work reveals the performative enactment of blindness that is lived in the public as well as in the private corners of the self, demonstrating how blindness is a form of perception. Devon Healey's work orients to blindness as a necessary and creative feature of the sensorium and shows how blindness is a form of perception.

Seeing with the Hands Mark Paterson, 2016-02-29. A literary, historical and philosophical discussion of attitudes to blindness by the sighted and what the blind see. Why has there been a persistent fascination by the sighted, including philosophers, poets and the public, in what the blind see? Is the experience of being blind as Descartes declared, like seeing with the hands? What happens on the rare occasions when surgery allows previously blind people to see for the very first time? And how did evidence from early experimental surgery inform those philosophical debates about vision and touch? These questions and others were prompted by a question that the Irish scientist Molyneux asked an English philosopher, Locke, in 1688: but which was to have implications for British empiricism, French sensationism and the beginnings of psychology that outlasted the long tail of the Enlightenment. Through an unfolding historical and philosophical narrative, the book follows up responses to this question in Britain and France and considers it as an early articulation of sensory substitution: the substitution of one sense, touch, for another, vision. This concept has influenced attitudes towards blindness and technologies for the blind and vision impaired to this day.

The Difference that Disability Makes Rod Michalko, 2002. Rod Michalko launches into this book asking why disabled people are still feared, still regarded as useless or unfit to live, not yet welcome in society. Michalko challenges us to come to grips with the social meanings attached to disability and the body that is not normal. Michalko's analysis draws from his own understanding of blindness and narratives by other disabled people Connecting lived experience with social theory he shows the consistent exclusion of disabled people from the common understandings of humanity and what constitutes the good life He offers new insight into what suffering a disability means to individuals as well as to the polity as a whole He shows how disability can teach society about itself about its determination of what is normal and who belongs Guiding us to a new understanding of how disability difference and suffering are related this book enables us to choose disability as a social identity and a collective political issue The difference that disability makes can be valuable and worthwhile but only if we choose to make it so Author note Rod Michalko is Associate Professor of Sociology at St Francis Xavier University He is the author of The Mystery of the Eye and the Shadow of Blindness 1998 and The Two in One Walking with Smokie Walking with Blindness Temple 1999 Undaunted by Blindness, 2nd Edition Clifford E.
