RAIN FOREST RELATIONS Melissa Leach, 1994-08-17 Centering on the Mende speaking people living around the Gola forest reserves in Sierra Leone Rainforest Relations shows how local communities and individuals in rainforest regions use and view forest resources amid international environmental scrutiny and changing socioeconomic conditions Leach argues that if both the rainforests and their human inhabitants are to survive conservation policies must refocus to address local interests in general and women's interests in particular Drawing on anthropological fieldwork in Mende communities Leach details day to day interaction with the environment examining labor and tenure arrangements gathered products and their markets hunting and fishing practices and crop types She focuses on different women's and men's experiences and their access to use and control of the land She shows how links between local women and their environment depend on dynamic gender relations in agriculture forest resource use and social life This gender study is placed in the context of both an overview of West African conservation agendas over the past century and an examination of the strengths and weaknesses of ecofeminism and other currently popular approaches to women and the environment BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved Rainforest Relations Melissa Leach, 1994 With environmental change and conservation in West Africa's tropical rainforests becoming topics of increasing political and academic interest this book brings a fresh set of perspectives to the debate those of the forest dwellers themselves Based on her detailed field research in the Mende communities around Gola North Forest reserve and surveying the recent debates and literature concerning forest conservations and current analytical approaches to gender and the environment Melissa Leach examines the importance of rainforest resources to the local economy and social relations and shows that neither an understanding of forest use and change nor adequate conservation policies can be achieved without a concern for gender

Ecofeminist Natures Noel Sturgeon, 2016-01-08 Examining the development of ecofeminism from the 1980s antimilitarist movement to an internationalist ecofeminism in the 1990s Sturgeon explores the ecofeminist notions of gender race and nature She moves from detailed historical investigations of important manifestations of US ecofeminism to a broad analysis of international environmental politics Tropical Rainforest Responses to Climatic Change Mark B. Bush, John Flenley, 2007 The goal of this book is to provide a current overview of the impacts of climate change on tropical forests to investigate past present and future climatic influences on the ecosystems with the highest biodiversity on the planet Tropical Rainforest Responses to Climatic Change will be the first book to examine how tropical rain forest ecology is altered by climate change rather than simply seeing how plant communities were altered Shifting the emphasis onto ecological processes e.g. how diversity is structured by climate and the subsequent impact on tropical forest ecology provides the reader with a more comprehensive coverage A major theme of this book that emerges progressively is the interaction between humans climate and forest ecology While numerous books have appeared dealing with forest fragmentation and conservation none have explicitly explored the long term occupation of tropical systems the influence of fire and the future climatic effects of deforestation coupled with anthropogenic emissions Incorporating modelling of past and future systems paves the way for a discussion of conservation from a climatic perspective rather than the usual plea to stop logging Ecology and Management of a Neotropical Rainforest Sylvie Gourlet-Fleury, Jean-Marc Guehl, Olivier Laroussinie, 2004 In 1982 the Sylvicultural research on the natural forest stands of French Guiana operation was initiated and since then the Paracou experimental site has been a favourite place for basic logical research concerning the structure dynamics diversity and functioning of the lowland rainforest of coastal French Guiana The site offers more than 100 hectares of plots where trees are fully mapped and an experimental design combining logging and thinning with undisturbed controls allowing assessment of the impact of well documented disturbances on the characteristics of various forest stands and tree populations In this book 40 authors summarize their experience and results at Paracou Topics include i forest structure and floristic composition ii ecosystem level carbon dynamics iii light requirements patterns of water use and root symbiotic status of the main species iv gene flow and genetic diversity v regeneration strategies growth behaviour and dynamics of stands before and after silvicultural operations vi modelling forest dynamics A final chapter discusses the practical lessons for forest management that have resulted from research operations at Paracou This book is intended for advanced students and researchers in tropical forestry and ecology as well as forest managers and decision makers concerned by the potential impact of human actions on tropical forest ecosystems
