

LOST AT SEA

7 Tips
and Tricks
For Ocean
Navigation

SURVIVAL GUIDE

An essential skill for survival is knowing how to navigate and survive when you're lost at sea. Don't lose hope and keep these things in mind so you'll be prepared for any situation.

DRINK WATER

When lost at sea, even though you're surrounded by water from the ocean, don't drink it! Salt water will only put you at risk for dehydration, so it's better to drink and collect rainwater instead.

BUILD SHELTER AND FIND CLOTHING

Be sure to keep any piece of clothing or tarp since it can also be used to cover up during extremely cold temperatures. For hotter temperatures, you can prop up the tarp to create a roof.

BE WARY OF SHARK ATTACKS

Be wary of sharks in open water. If you feel that a shark is about to attack you, thrust something against its nose or hit its eyes or gills.

SEARCH OR CATCH FOOD

Use a paracord or any string as a fishing line. Seaweed, seabird, or planktons are also possible options to help you survive while you're lost at sea.

LOOK OUT FOR LAND

Don't lose hope for finding land. Remember these three signs: lighter-colored water, wave patterns that retract, and the presence of birds. These three signs signal that a piece of land is near your location.

RELAX

Avoid straining and stressing yourself to avoid sweating and getting dehydrated. Being calm also aids your mind to think more clearly about your next steps.

SIGNAL FOR HELP

Use your smartphone screen or a mirror to attract the attention of rescue airplanes or ships. The signal can reach up to 10 miles on a sunny day.
