Rothenberg, 2002-02-01 Within a federal system government agencies and regulatory policies can be fractured even at odds with each other National actors share power with their counterparts in states and localities as do presidents with Congressional leaders and bureaucrats with judges Understanding the broad economic and political contexts of environmental policymaking illuminates the motivations behind policy choices of various interested parties from the National Park Service and the EPA to environmental activists and members of Congress Rothenberg utilizes basic economic ideas to provide not only a fresh look at how the U S deals with environmental ills but a way of thinking about policy making in general Putting Trust in the US Budget Eric M. Patashnik, 2000 In the United States many important programs are paid from trust funds At a time when major social insurance funds are facing insolvency this book provided the first comprehensive study of this significant yet little studied feature of the American welfare state Equally importantly the author investigates an enduring issue in democratic politics can current officeholders bind their successors By law trust funds which get most of their money from earmarked taxes are restricted for specific uses Patashnik asks why these structures were created and how they have affected political dynamics He argues that officeholders have used trust funds primarily to reduce political uncertainty and bind distant futures Based on detailed case studies of trust funds in a number of policy sectors he shows how political commitment is a developmental process whereby precommitments shape the content of future political conflicts This book will be of interest to students of public policy political economy and American political development
