Abstract A source of anxiety of policy makers and the public in general is the detrimental impact of trade and immigration on unemployment. The transitory restrictions for worker migration after the EU enlargements of 2004 and 2007 exemplify the supposed negative effect of immigration on labor markets. This paper aims to identify the effects of immigration alongside trade on unemployment controlling for the high correlation between immigration and goods flows in order to prevent an omitted variable bias. The authors use data from 24 OECD countries over the period from 1997 to 2007 and employ instrumental variables fixed effects and dynamic panel estimators in order to account for unobserved heterogeneity as well as the potential endogeneity of migration flows and the high persistence of unemployment. We find no significant effect of immigration on unemployment on average.

Migration Unemployment And Trade:

Migration, Unemployment and Trade Bharat R. Hazari, Pasquale M. Sgro, 2001-05-31 Migration Unemployment and Trade focuses on the issues of migration welfare and unemployment in a trade and development framework Several chapters of the book analyze the implications of internal labor mobility in a model designed to highlight its implications for regional welfare urban unemployment rural urban dichotomy and structural adjustment An important innovation in this work is the disaggregation of the economy and the use of separate utility functions to highlight non homogeneity of preferences The book also deals with international mobility of factors in different frameworks In particular it concentrates on the highly emotive issue of legal and illegal migration Thus this work incorporates interesting and important features of labor economics and factor mobility into trade and distortion theory Migration, Unemployment and Trade Bharat R.

of Immigration Örn B. Bodvarsson, Hendrik Van den Berg, 2009-06-12 The inspiration for this book came from a collaborative research project on immigration begun in 2001 when we were colleagues at University of Nebraska Lincoln Bodvarsson was a Visiting Professor there in 2001 05 Our project dealt with the application of Say's Law to the supply of immigrant labor meaning that when the supply of immigrant labor grows in an area the new immigrants being consumers bolster labor demand and help to offset the lower wages they may bring about Our test case was the seemingly obscure Dawson County Nebraska where the meatpacking industry experienced a relatively huge increase in Hispanic born labor supply around 1990 We found for Dawson County this demand effect to be significant and our results for this test case generalizable to other more prominent test cases This inspired us to study the famous Mariel Boatlift where Miami's labor force grew suddenly by 7% due to the arrival of nearly 125 000 Cuban refugees in the spring of 1980 In that study we showed that the Marielitos exerted a significant demand effect which we argue helps to account for the stylized fact that the Mariel influx had a relatively benign effect on the Miami labor market We had the privilege of presenting both studies at various conferences in the USA Norway Taiwan and Israel and these studies have been published in Labour Economics and the Research in Labor Economics series both studies are discussed in detail in this book Trade, migration and regional unemployment [Paolo Epifani, Gino Gancia, 2003 Bimonthly Summary of Labor Market Developments in Major Areas, 1953
