On The Problem Of Empathy:

On the Problem of Empathy Edith Stein, 2013-12-19 Edith Stein scholar and nun is known today as much for her life as for her work. Because she was of Jewish descent she was forced to sacrifice herself in the gas chambers of Auschwitz in 1942. But even before her conversion to Catholicism she had distinguished herself as a scholar by her work as Husserl's assistant in Freiburg and by her inaugural dissertation on empathy. The present work is a translation of this dissertation as it was published in 1917 in Halle. The conception of empathy that Edith Stein develops here follows very closely the work of Husserl in Volume II of the Ideas. Martinus Nijhoff 1952. At the same time it is in contrast with his later Cartesian Meditations. Martinus Nijhoff 1963 which attempt to resolve a somewhat different problem. Thus Edith Stein presents a distinction between the living body Leib as the center of orientation of the spatial world and the material body Körper understood as a physical thing. Since Maurice Merleau-Ponty also had access to Volume II of the Ideas when formulating his notion of the lived body le corps vécu it is not surprising to find his conception strikingly similar to that of Edith Stein at the same time as it presents some provocative contrasts. Though Edith Stein does not use the term her concept of the spatial world adumbrates the Lebenswelt which plays such a prominent role in contemporary phenomenology and existentialism. In her chapter on the mind Edith Stein presents a concept of the cultural sciences and the method appropriate to them as opposed to the method of natural sciences. She develops this contrast in terms of Wilhelm Dilthey's reliving understanding nachlebendes Verstehen with emendations in the context of her particular analysis. Also of interest is her outline of an approach to the structure of feeling as a basis for understanding value that takes into consideration Max Scheler's work. This work in general is richly stimulating in its clear concise analyses apt examples and relevance to problems that continue to concern philosophers today. The translator it may be noted is a grand niece of Edith Stein who is presently serving as assistant professor of philosophy at the State University College of New York at Oswego. The radical viewpoint of phenomenology is presented by T. 3 Edmund Husserl in his Ideas. This viewpoint seems quite simple at first but becomes exceedingly complex and involves intricate distinctions when attempts are made to apply it to actual problems. Therefore it may be well to attempt a short statement of this position in order to note the general problems with which it is dealing as well as the method of solution which it proposes. I shall emphasize the elements of phenomenology which seem most relevant to E. Stein's work. Husserl deals with two traditional philosophical questions and in answering them develops the method of phenomenological reduction which he maintains is the basis of all science. These questions are: What is it that can be known without doubt? and How is this knowledge possible in the most general sense? In the tradition of idealism he takes consciousness as the area to be investigated He posits nothing about the natural world He puts it in brackets as a portion of an algebraic formula is put in brackets and makes no use of the material within these brackets This does not mean that the real world does not exist he says emphatically it only means that this existence is a presupposition must be suspended to achieve pure description On the Problem of Empathy W.J.
