Survey of Current Business, 1982. Discourse in Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) Classrooms Christiane Dalton-Puffer, 2007-09-27. The label CLIL stands for classrooms where a foreign language (English) is used as a medium of instruction in content subjects. This book provides a first in-depth analysis of the kind of communicative abilities which are embodied in such CLIL classrooms. It examines teacher and student talk at secondary school level from different discourse analytic angles, taking into account the interpersonal pragmatics of classroom discourse and how school subjects are talked into being during lessons. The analysis shows how CLIL classroom interaction is strongly shaped by its institutional context, which in turn conditions the ways in which students experience, use, and learn the target language. The research presented here suggests that CLIL programmes require more explicit language learning goals in order to fully exploit their potential for furthering the learners' appropriation of a foreign language as a medium of learning.

Zero Carbon Industry, Eco-Innovation and Environmental Sustainability Rubee Singh, Amit Joshi, Walter Leal Filho, Shahbaz Khan, 2025-01-29. This book provides the latest research on zero carbon industry and its practical implications for eco innovation and environmental sustainability for businesses in the current scenario. In a zero carbon industry, there would be profound, sometimes disruptive changes in our economy compared to our current one. As the world approaches zero carbon industry by 2050, economic output will shift progressively and permanently toward those goods and services that do not emit greenhouse gases. Changes in these dynamics would ripple along entire value chains, transforming industries. Creating a zero carbon industry will require fundamental changes in both our economies and societies. Taking eco innovation and environmental sustainability seriously will be crucial to businesses, and companies are increasingly keen to signal this commitment. This book aims to illustrate a detailed exploration of the complex and interconnected domains of zero carbon industry, eco innovation, and environmental sustainability. In addition to combining the academic expertise of emerging and established scholars from different academic fields, this book provides an integrated understanding of the topic on zero carbon emissions, eco innovation, and environmental sustainability from a broader perspective by combining the work of established and emerging scholars. There is a need to fundamentally transform the zero carbon industry, eco innovation ecosystem in order to achieve sustainability through the implementation of Industry 4.0 technologies such as artificial intelligence, Internet of things, blockchain, and cloud technologies. The book sheds light on various advancements in zero carbon industry, eco innovation, and emerging technologies for the purpose of sustainability and aims to address the urgency of responding to the UN Sustainable Development Goals (UN SDGs) as part of the global mandate.

The Impact of Oportunidades on Human Capital and Income Distribution Dario Debowicz, Jennifer

Golan,2013-04-05 In an effort to inform social policy in Mexico this paper analyzes the effects of a major social program on school attendance and household income distribution accounting for its partial and general equilibrium effects Linking a microeconomic simulation model and a general equilibrium model in a bidirectional way the paper explicitly takes spillover effects of the Oportunidades conditional cash transfer program into account Our results suggest that partial equilibrium analysis alone may underestimate the distributional effects of the program Extending the coverage of the program leads to a significant increase in school attendance which reduces labor supply and increases the equilibrium wages of the children who remain at work This general equilibrium effect indirectly reduces income inequality and poverty at the national level Filling the learning gap in program implementation using participatory monitoring and evaluation Elias Zerfu,Sindu W. Kebede,2013-03-29 This study is motivated by the idea that even though participatory monitoring and evaluation PM E is widely accepted as a tool to manage development programs to be effective its application is widely constrained by its high start up resource requirements in terms of both finance and time However this paper argues that after the initial investment is made the payback from using PM E is much higher both in terms of grassroots level learning empowerment and capacity building and in terms of higher level strategic decision making which enhances impact This is demonstrated using field level experience of implementing PM E in farmer field schools FFSs under the Agricultural Services Support Program and Agricultural Sector Development Program Livestock ASSP ASDP L program in Zanzibar Tanzania After describing the major steps followed in designing and implementing a PM E for FFSs the major lessons learned and challenges faced in the process are discussed The study found out that PM E has enabled the tracking of technology uptake and reasons behind adoption and nonadoption of technologies through detailed data collection This informed and improved decision making at a higher level to design feasible methods to scale up adoption at other FFSs and to devise solutions for nonadoption The need for incentives to undertake PM E was found to be one of the major challenges of implementation among others
