

II. Returns to schooling and the speed of reforms and macroeconomic disequilibrium

1. How cross-country variation in the growth of returns to schooling in transition economies can be explained by the speed of market reforms, initial conditions, and degree of macroeconomic volatility during the early reform period.
2. Reform progress is defined in terms of liberalization of prices and wages, private ownership, enterprise reforms, and the openness of the economy; used quantitative measures such as the proportion of GDP produced in the private sector and the share of foreign direct investment (FDI) in GDP as well as qualitative indices developed by the EBRD, such as the degree of price, wage and trade liberalization, large-scale privatization, and enterprise restructuring.
3. An overall measure of the speed of reforms, which is a composite of all seven reform indices and variables.
4. Transition approach
 - The big bang reform (CEER) vs growing out of the plan approach (China, where the Chinese Communist Party has retained political power throughout the econ transition).
5. In contrast to its relatively slow movement toward free markets, China experienced the most rapid economic growth among these transition economies.

Beyond Regimes Duara Prasenjit,Elizabeth

J. Perry,2020-10-26 For many years China and India have been powerfully shaped by both transnational and subnational circulatory forces This edited volume explores these local and global influences as they play out in the contemporary era The analysis focuses on four intersecting topics labor relations legal reform and rights protest public goods provision and transnational migration and investment The eight substantive chapters and introduction share a common perspective in arguing that distinctions in regime type democracy versus dictatorship alone offer little insight into critical differences and similarities between these Asian giants in terms of either policies or performance A wide variety of subnational and transnational actors from municipal governments to international organizations and from local NGO activists to a far flung diaspora have been and will continue to be decisive The authors approach China and India through a strategy of convergent comparison in which they investigate temporal and spatial parallels at various critical junctures at various levels of the political system and both inside and outside the territorial confines of the nation state The intensified globalization of recent decades only heightens the need to view state initiatives against such a wider canvas

Update, Volume -96 Analysis, Reports, Policy Documents Editors : Raj Kapila & Uma Kapila, 2005 India Transformed

Rakesh Mohan, 2018-09-25 In this commemorative volume India s top business leaders and economic luminaries come together to provide a balanced picture of the consequences of the country's economic reforms which were initiated in 1991. What were the reforms? What were they intended for? How have they affected the overall functioning of the economy? With contributions from Mukesh Ambani, Narayana Murthy, Sunil Mittal, Kiran Mazumdar Shaw, Shivshankar Menon, Montek Singh Ahluwalia, T. N. Ninan, Sanjaya Baru, Naushad Forbes, Omkar Goswami, and R. Gopalakrishnan, India Transformed delves deep into the life of an economically liberalized India through the eyes of the people who helped transform it. Strengthening China's and India's Trade and Investment Ties to the Middle East and North Africa, 2009. China and India's spectacular economic rise over the last two decades has accelerated their trade and investment flows with the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) particularly with the oil-producing countries. And while these flows are still small, China and India's presence in the region is on the rise. This report focuses on the following questions: what have been the evolution and the impact of MENA's trade and investment relations with China and India; what actions can be taken to maximize the benefits from these relations and to enhance MENA's international integration? The main findings indicate that the region as a whole has benefited from the rise of China and India in terms of better terms of trade, significant increases in oil and gas exports and cheaper imports. However, producers of industrial goods have been negatively and in a few cases severely affected by competition with the two Asian countries in both third and domestic markets. While China and India are investing more in MENA, they are contributing very little to job creation or to the transfer and diffusion of technology. Faster growth in the two Asian countries and the associated higher demand for energy will increase revenues from oil and the difficult choices associated with their management. For the labor-abundant, non-oil-producing countries, competition with China and India will increase. But the lack of competitive manufacturing industries and services, the insufficient attention given in the past to building technological capabilities and promoting openness and entrepreneurship are constraining their ability to respond to competition. They need to accelerate productivity to tackle unemployment, especially among youth. This may require broader institutional changes seen in China and India, suggesting the importance of a pragmatic reform agenda that can accelerate productivity, trade and investment in the region.
