Returning soldiers and a rising African intelligentsia fueled the growing nationalist movement in Africa. Moreover, the emergence of an independent India further catalyzed the anti-colonial movement. The struggle for independence assumed different forms and modes: from appeals to the colonial powers to mass political campaigns to bloody uprisings. In 1957, Ghana became the first African nation to become independent. Further African decolonization occurred with the independence of Guinea, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, Congo, Uganda, Kenya, Zambia, Morocco, Tunisia, Algeria, Malawi, Gambia, Botswana, Swaziland, Cameroon, Chad, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Madagascar, Mali, Senegal, and Niger.

The Second World War (1939-1945) had a profound impact on the then British colony of the Gold Coast. Ghanaians began to protest their exclusion from the corridors of power and the exploitation of the country and its people. Those who had served in the war played a key role. In August 1947 the United Gold Coast Convention (U.G.C.C). The central slogan of this political party was the demand for "Self government within the shortest possible time". Kwame Nkrumah became the full-time General Secretary of the Party, emerging as the central figure in the independence struggle. A general boycott of European goods was carried out in January of 1948, which resulted in a series of riots the following month. The most dramatic event, however, was the February 28, 1948 shooting of veterans who had served in the Second World War. Veterans organized a peaceful march in Accra (the capital) to protest their living conditions. This unarmed group was fired on, killing several people. Riots then ensued. In order to assert their authority and control British colonial officials arrested the nationalist leaders, including Nkrumah.
