Archaeology of Medieval Germany Günter P. Fehring,2014-10-24 Medieval archaeology is a relatively young discipline It relies heavily on and contributes to the neighbouring disciplines of history and geography as well as certain of the natural sciences The kinds of sources investigated in the context of medieval archaeology also cast light on many aspects of life in later centuries The main sources used are graveyards churches and churchyards castles and fortifications rural and urban settlements technical production sites and routes of communication Closely allied to these are the numerous finds of small objects of everyday life from cutlery and tools to animal remains and grain This book is a comprehensive discussion of what can be established from the use of such materials about the culture and daily life of medieval Germany Each subject is augmented with the use of many illustrations Besides methodological questions the author considers what can be learnt about the history of settlement and architecture of technology of economic and social matters of churches and missions and of population diet and vegetation Kulturgeschichte der "Kulturgeschichten" Martin Eichhorn,2002 Handbook of Plant Palaeoecology (First edition 2012) René T. J. Cappers,Reinder Neef,2012-01-06 Plant palaeoecologists use data from plant fossils and plant subfossils to reconstruct ecosystems of the past This book deals with the study of subfossil plant material retrieved from archaeological excavations and cores dated to the Late Glacial and Holocene One of the main objectives of this book is to describe the processes that underlie the formation of the archaeobotanical archive and the ultimate composition of the archaeobotanical records being the data that are sampled and identified from this immense archive Our understanding of these processes benefits from a knowledge of plant ecology and traditional agricultural practices and food processing This handbook summarizes the basic ecological principles that relate to the reconstruction of former vegetations and of agricultural practices in particular We hope this book will help palaeobotanists environmental archaeologists and colleagues from related disciplines optimize inferences based on what we could term old style archaeobotany And we hope that our observations will serve as an eye opener and improve future research not only as it is practised in our laboratories but also as it is practised in the field The Oxford Handbook of Engineering and dyes using LC MS and UV VIS are described Practical knowledge based on analysis and visualization of historical textiles for the needs of museum conservation exhibition digital technology and virtual museums is addressed as well Audience It will serve as an educational asset and tool for researchers art scholars archaeologists museum curators and those who are interested in the field of traditional or historic textile collections The Competition of Fibres Wolfram Schier,Susan Pollock,2020-04-30 The central issues discussed in this new collected work in the highly successful ancient textiles series are the relationships between fiber resources and availability on the one hand and the ways those resources were exploited to produce textiles on the other Technological and economic practices for example the strategies by which raw materials were acquired and prepared in the production of textiles play a major role in the papers collected here Contributions investigate the beginnings of wool use in western Asia and southeastern Europe The importance of wool in considerations of early textiles is due to at least two factors First both wild as well as some domesticated sheep are characterized by a hairy rather than a woolly coat This raises the question of when and where woolly sheep emerged a question that has not up to now been resolvable by genetic or other biological analyses Second wool as a fiber has played a major role both economically and socially in both western Asian and European societies from as early as the 3rd millennium BCE in Mesopotamia and it continues to do so in different ways up to the modern day Despite the importance of wool as a fiber resource contributors demonstrate clearly that its development and use can only be properly addressed in the context of a consideration of other fibers both plant and animal Only within a framework that takes into account historically and regionally variable strategies of procurement processing and the products of different types of fibers is it possible to gain real insights into the changing roles played by fibers and textiles in the lives of people in different places and times in the past With relatively rare albeit sometimes spectacular exceptions archaeological contexts offer only poor conditions of preservation for textiles As a result archaeologists are dependent on indirect or proxy indicators such as textile tools e g loom weights spindle whorls and the analysis of faunal remains to explore a range of such proxies and methods by which they may be analyzed and evaluated in order to contribute to an understanding of fiber and textile production and use in the past The Ancient Mediterranean Environment between Science and History William V.
