To which are added practical instructions for making Malt John PITT (Butler.),1859 Country House Brewing in England, 1500-1900 Pamela Sambrook,1996-07-01 Until the 18th century or even later beer was the staple drink of most men and women at all levels of society Tea and coffee were expensive luxuries while water might well carry disease To supply the needs of both owners and servants every country house with an accessible source of water had a brewhouse usually close at hand Although many of the brewhouses still stand in some cases with the original brewing vessels as at Lacock and Charlecote their habitual conversion to other uses has allowed them to be ignored Yet they are distinctive buildings as much part of a country house as an ice house or stables which need both to be recognized and preserved The scale of brewing in country houses which went on to a surprisingly late date in the 19th century with odd survivals such as Hickleton in Yorkshire in the 20th was often considerable if small besides that of commercial brewing Copious records for both brewing and consumption exist Pamela Sambrook describes the brewing equipment such as coppers mash tuns underbacks and coolers the types of beers brewed from strong ale to small beer and how they were kept and the brewers themselves their skills and attitudes English Country House Brewing 1500 1900 shows the role beer played in the life of the country house with beer allowances and beer money an integral part of servants rewards Generous allowances were made for arduous tasks such as harvesting For celebrations such as the heir s coming of age extra strong ale was provided This book which is heavily illustrated is an important and original contribution to architectural brewing and social history The Manual of Brewing Egbert Grant Hooper,1891

Every Home a Distillery Sarah H. Meacham, 2009-10-12 In this original examination of alcohol production in early America Sarah Hand Meacham uncovers the crucial role women played in cidery and distilling in the colonial Chesapeake Her fascinating story is one defined by gender class technology and changing patterns of production Alcohol was essential to colonial life the region's water was foul milk was generally unavailable and tea and coffee were far too expensive for all but the very wealthy Colonists used alcohol to drink in cooking as a cleaning agent in beauty products and as medicine Meacham finds that the distillation and brewing of alcohol for these purposes traditionally fell to women Advice and recipes in such guidebooks as The Accomplish'd Ladys Delight demonstrate that women were the main producers of alcohol until the middle of the 18th century Men mostly small planters then supplanted women using new and cheaper technologies to make the region's cider ale and whiskey Meacham compares alcohol production in the Chesapeake with that in New England the middle colonies and Europe finding the Chesapeake to be far more isolated than even the other American colonies She explains how home brewers used new technologies such as small alembic stills and inexpensive cider pressing machines in their alcoholic enterprises She links the importation of coffee and tea in America to the temperance movement showing how the wealthy became concerned with alcohol consumption only after they found something less inebriating to drink Taking a few pages from contemporary guidebooks Every Home a Distillery includes samples of historic recipes and instructions on how to make alcoholic beverages American historians will find this study both enlightening and surprising
