Shifting Languages Interaction And Identity In Javanese Indonesia:

Shifting Languages J. Joseph Errington, 1998-12-10 Until recently Indonesian the national language of a vast plural nation state was spoken by very few of the Javanese who live in south central Java But the national language is now being learned along with a national identity and is the key vehicle for modernity and progress in these communities Errington has written a fascinating account of the role of language in radical social transformation

Shifting Languages James Joseph Errington, 1998-12-10 Indonesian is the national language of a vast plural nation state the world's fourth largest country with a population of over 200 million Although its use is growing rapidly and is now spoken by nearly everyone over the age of six it has almost relatively few native speakers This remarkable growth unprecedented in the development world is largely due to the forceful presence of state institutions that use promote and disseminate a language first introduced by the Dutch colonial administration Joseph Errington's third book on language in Indonesia is a detailed analysis of shifting languages in two small Javanese communities A key figure in this area of research he examines changing conversation practices in relation to questions of ethnicity nationalism and political culture Errington concludes that the Javanese story has theoretical implications beyond the two villages to other parts of Indonesia South East Asia and to the developing world in general

Language, Migration, and Identity Zane Goebel, 2010-07-29 While much scholarship has been devoted to the interplay between language identity and social relationships we know less about how this plays out interactionally in diverse transient settings Based on research in Indonesia this book examines how talk plays an important role in mediating social relations in two urban spaces where linguistic and cultural diversity is the norm and where distinctions between newcomers and old timers changes regularly How do people who do not share expectations about how they should behave build new expectations through participating in conversation Starting from a view of language society dynamics as enregisterment Zane Goebel uses interactional sociolinguistics and the ethnography of communication to explore how language is used in this contact setting to build and present identities expectations and social relations It will be welcomed by researchers and students working in the fields of linguistic anthropology sociolinguistics the anthropology of migration and Asian studies

Language and Superdiversity Zane Goebel, 2015-06-11 Scholars of language ideology have encouraged us to reflect on and explore where social categories come from how they have been reproduced and whether and to what extent they are relevant to everyday interactional practices Taking up on these issues this book focuses on how ethnicity has been semiotically constructed valued and reproduced in Indonesia since Dutch colonial times and how this category is drawn upon in everyday talk
