African Studies and Shakespeare Studies by opening up new possibilities for transdisciplinary dialogues and cross fertilization The book will be useful for students and scholars of African Theatre and Performance Cultural Studies Global Shakespeare Studies Translation and Adaptation Studies and Post colonial Studies Across The Colour Line in an American City Godfrey Mwakikagile,2020-07-18 A study of race relations in an American city including personal experiences and the status of blacks whose minority position has had a profound impact on their well being It also addresses issues of national relevance Reflections on Race Relations: A Personal Odyssey Godfrey Mwakikagile,2021-07-03 The author looks at race relations when he was growing up in Africa and his experiences in the United States He grew up when his home country was under colonial rule He later lived for many years in another country the United States that was also dominated by whites He examines similarities between the two white dominated societies and looks at how life was for non whites in his home country during those years It is a work of comparative analysis in terms of race relations and draws heavily on the author s personal experience He not only addresses the subject from a personal perspective but also in the broader context of society as a whole A lot of what he has written is based on what he has observed and experienced through the years amounting to a personal journey through life in colonial Africa and in the United States He also looks at his life with African Americans including those who were members of an organisation that sponsored African students to study in the United States He was one of those sponsored by the organisation His reflections on race relations have been partly shaped by the existence of racism in the United States as a major problem in contemporary times The malignancy of racism in the United States was underscored by massive protests across the country by people of all races the largest since the civil rights movement following the brutal murder of a black man George Floyd by a white police officer in May 2020 an execution that sent shock waves round the globe where there were also protests in many countries in support of racial equality in America protests the author says could have been the beginning of the second civil rights movement Never before had so many whites in every city and every state participated in such demonstrations alongside blacks demanding racial justice And never before had such demonstrations been organised and carried on on sustained basis throughout the country for several months The status of black people in the United States with whom he interacted for many years prospects for racial harmony and reconciliation and the quest for racial justice are some of the subjects he has addressed in the book drawing on his experiences as someone who has firsthand knowledge of the subject because of what he went through when he was growing up as a colonial subject in Africa and when he lived in the United States as someone who was not spared the agony and the anguish of being a victim of racism It is an odyssey that is reflected in the lives of many other people making the book more than just an account of the experiences of the author alone It is a reflection of other lives as well especially of those whose collective identity is also shared by the author From African Peer Review Mechanisms to African Queer Review Mechanisms? Nhemachena, Artwell, Warikandwa, Tapiwa Victor,2019-04-22 Tracing recent bouts of globalised

Mugabephobia to Robert Mugabe's refusal to be neoimperially penetrated this book juxtaposes economic liberalisation with the mounting liberalisation of African orifices. Reading land repossession and economic structural adjustment programmes together with what they call neoimperial structural adjustment of African orifices the authors argue that there has been liberalisation of African orifices in a context where Africans are ironically prevented from repossessing their material resources. Juxtaposing recent bouts of Mugabephobia with discourses on homophobia the book asks why empire prefers liberalising African orifices rather than attending to African demands for restitution restoration and reparations. Noting that empire opposes African sovereignty autonomy and centralisation of power while paradoxically promoting transnational corporations centralisation of power over African economies the book challenges contemporary discourses about shared sovereignty distributed governance heterarchy heteronomy and ontology. Arguing that colonialists similarly denied Africans of their human essence the tome problematises queer sexualities homosexuality ecosexuality cybersexuality and humanoid robotic sexuality all of which complicate supposedly fundamental distinctions between human beings and animals and machines. Provocatively questioning queer sexuality and liberalised orifices that serve to divert African attention from the more serious unfinished business of repossessing material resources the book insightfully compares Robert Gabriel Mugabe Thomas Sankara and Julius Kambarage Nyerere who emphasised the imperatives of African autonomy ownership control and sovereignty over natural resources. Observing Africans' interest in repossessing ownership and control over their resources the book wonders why so much queer international attention is focused on foisting queer sexuality while downplaying more burning issues of resource repossession human dignity equality and equity craved by Africans for whom life is not confined to sexuality. With insights for scholars in sociology development studies law politics African studies anthropology transformation decolonisation and decoloniality the book argues that liberal democracy is a facade in a world that is actually ruled through criminocracy.

Human Rights Education and the Politics of Knowledge Joanne Coysh, 2017-02-24. Around the world there are a myriad of NGOs using human rights education HRE as a tool of community empowerment with the firm belief that it will help people improve their lives. One way of understanding these processes is that they translate universal human rights speak using messages and symbols which make them relevant to people's daily lives and culturally resonant. However, an alternative more radical perspective is that these processes should engage individuals in modes of critical inquiry into the ways that existing power structures maintain the status quo and control not only how we understand and speak about social inequality and injustice but also act on it. This book is a critical inquiry into the production, distribution and consumption of HRE and how the discourse is constructed historically, socially and politically through global institutions and local NGO practice. The book begins with the premise that HRE is composed of theories of human rights and education both of which are complex and multifaceted. However, the book demonstrates how over time a dominant discourse of HRE constructed by the United Nations institutional framework has come to prominence and the ways it is reproduced and reinforced through the practice of intermediary NGOs engaged in HRE activities with community groups. Drawing on socio-legal scholarship, it offers a new theoretical and political framework for addressing how human rights pedagogy, knowledge and power can be analysed between the global and local by connecting the critical but well-trodden theories of human rights to insights on critical pedagogy. It uses critical discourse analysis and ethnographic research to investigate the practice of NGOs engaged in HRE using contextual evidence and findings from fieldwork with NGOs and communities in Tanzania.

Indigenous Discourses on Knowledge and Development in Africa Edward Shizha, Ali A. Abdi, 2013-12-04 African social development is often explained from outsider perspectives that are mainly European and Euro-American, leaving African indigenous discourses and ways of knowing and doing absent from discussions and debates on knowledge and development. This book is intended to present Africanist indigenous voices in current debates on economic, educational, political and social development in Africa. The authors and contributors to the volume present bold and timely ideas and scholarship for defining Africa through its challenges, possible policy formations, planning and implementation at the local, regional and national levels. The book also reveals insightful examinations of the hype, the myths and the realities of many topics of concern with respect to dominant development discourses and challenges the misconceptions and misrepresentations of indigenous perspectives on knowledge productions and overall social well-being or lack thereof. The volume brings together researchers who are concerned with comparative education, international development and African development research and practice in particular. Policy makers, institutional planners, education specialists, governmental and non-governmental managers and the wider public should all benefit from the contents and analyses of this book.
