Morss, 2017-12-06 Originally published in 1990 this book looks at the history of developmental psychology in order to locate and evaluate the role played by biology in its most influential formulations First Charles Darwin's own writings on child development are examined It is shown that Darwin endorsed such ideas as the recapitulation of evolutionary ancestry in the developing child even though this is inconsistent with his natural selection theory The first great developmentalists Hall Baldwin Freud adopted and applied these non Darwinian evolutionist ideas The next generation Vygotsky Piaget Werner applied similar ideas in a variety of ways Alongside this evolutionism but interconnected with it sensationist empiricist forms of epistemology were directing developmentalists from Rousseau onwards to see the child as having to work himself out of sense bound experience to develop further and further from the here and now Contemporary developmental theory retains these influences biological approaches ethological psychobiological remain pre Darwinian in spirit lifespan theories remain attached to biology formal cognitive approaches remain attached to sensationism Social context approaches are rather half hearted and it is only the social constructionist orientation which seems to offer a real alternative to biology Major conclusions are stated in chapter ten which includes a re evaluation of Darwin s role      Love as the Foundation of Moral Education and Character Development Luis Ugalde,Nicholas Barros,George F.
