Building the Foundation: Whole Numbers in the Primary Grades Maria G. Bartolini Bussi, Xu Hua Sun, 2018-03-29 This twenty third ICMI Study addresses for the first time mathematics teaching and learning in the primary school and pre school setting while also taking international perspectives socio cultural diversity and institutional constraints into account One of the main challenges of designing the first ICMI primary school study of this kind is the complex nature of mathematics at the early level Accordingly a focus area that is central to the discussion was chosen together with a number of related questions The broad area of Whole Number

Arithmetic WNA including operations and relations and arithmetic word problems forms the core content of all primary mathematics curricula. The study of this core content area is often regarded as foundational for later mathematics learning. However, the principles and main goals of instruction on the foundational concepts and skills in WNA are far from universally agreed upon and practice varies substantially from country to country. As such, this study presents a meta-level analysis and synthesis of what is currently known about WNA, providing a useful base from which to gauge gaps and shortcomings as well as an opportunity to learn from the practices of different countries and contexts.

The South China Sea Arbitration Stefan Talmon, 2022-08-08. This book examines the South China Sea Arbitration between the Philippines and China, widely hailed as a landmark case in the law of the sea. Stefan Talmon argues that while the Tribunal assembled international lawyers of the highest repute and unrivalled experience, the case was nevertheless decided wrongly. He examines every step of the proceedings and critically engages with both the Philippines' submissions and the Tribunal's rulings. He finds that the Tribunal was lacking jurisdiction to decide the case, that some of the Philippines' claims were also inadmissible, and that the Tribunal's awards were tainted with procedural errors.

Islamic Thought in China Lipman Jonathan Lipman, 2016-06-02. How can people belong simultaneously to two cultures originating in two different places and expressed in two different languages without alienating themselves from either? Muslims have lived in the Chinese culture area for 1400 years, and the intellectuals among them have long wrestled with this problem. Unlike Persian, Turkish, Urdu, or Malay, the Chinese language never adopted vocabulary from Arabic to enable a precise understanding of Islam's religious and philosophical foundations. Islam thus had to be translated into Chinese, which lacks words and arguments to justify monotheism, exclusivity, and other features of this Middle Eastern religion. Even in the 21st century, Muslims who are culturally Chinese must still justify their devotion to a single God, avoidance of pork, and their communities' distinctiveness among other things to sceptical non-Muslim neighbours and an increasingly intrusive state. The essays in this collection narrate the continuing translations and adaptations of Islam and Muslims in Chinese culture and society through the writings of Sino-Muslim intellectuals. Progressing chronologically and interlocking thematically, they help the reader develop a coherent understanding of the intellectual issues at stake.
