writing accounts of his famous victory and publishing his autobiography in 1913 Forty-Four Years, the Life of a Hunter: Meshach Browning, 2023-02-06 Meshach Browning spent decades as a professional hunter and trapper of bears, boars and deer in rural Maryland during the early 1800s. This is his story in his own words. Born in modest circumstances, Browning grew up at a time when the USA as a nation was in its infancy with much of the population living in rural areas. From his youth, the author vowed to be self-sufficient, leaving his home and first love to hone his hunting skills. Returning with money gained from selling pelts and meat, it is then that Meshach contemplates hunting as a career. The equipment the author used is much inferior to today's. Meshach's use of a musket gun, whose reliability is demonstrated as poor in several instances, leads him to rely on his skills in close quarters combat. On multiple hunts described with stunning vividness in these pages, Browning's ability to battle animals in melee saves his life. Dangers of his trade are balanced by its lucrativeness: bear meat and pelt, for instance, fetched high prices. Print ed. Memoirs of William and Nathan Hunt Taken from Their Journals and Letters. William Hunt, Nathan Hunt, 2023-03-30. Famous memoirs of father and son, Quaker ministers who travelled and preached widely across North America and the World on the precepts and tenets of the Friends. Nathan Hunt's family emigrated to what were then the colonies of New Jersey and Pennsylvania between 1670 and 1719. His father, William Hunt, was born in New Jersey and moved to North Carolina about 1752 and was a charter member of New Garden Monthly Meeting in present-day Greensboro when it was organized in 1754. Nathan was born in 1758 at the family farm about two miles from New Garden Friends Meeting, the third child of Sarah Mills and William Hunt. Nathan said that he never went to school for more than 6 months in his life. His father died during a missionary trip to England when Nathan was 14 and the family was left almost destitute. Some kindly neighbors arranged for Nathan to apprentice as a blacksmith. Another neighbor, Presbyterian minister Dr. David Caldwell, allowed him to borrow books from his library, one at a time, which Nathan read at night after the day's work was done. He had to read by the light of pine knots as candles were scarce and expensive. He later said, "I observed the language of the books and cultivated the habit of using it in my common conversation. The consequence was that I was often taken for a learned man. I spent much of my time in reading the Bible. The land in the Piedmont was still heavily forested and every community had to provide all of its own goods and services: making clothes, grinding corn, building houses and furniture. Nathan Hunt grew up in this pioneer atmosphere where every man could handle an axe and every woman could make butter. There were very few roads and mail service hardly existed. Cash was scarce and most stores accepted home-made goods as barter. Clothes were made of flax and wool, both home-grown. High Point, North Carolina.

The Life of Nathaniel Macon William E. Dodd, 2023-03-30. Founding Father, soldier, planter, representative in the North Carolina General Assembly, United States Congressman and Senator, Nathaniel Macon is and was one of the most important men ever from the Old North State. As of this publication, he stands as the only Speaker of the House of Representatives from North Carolina. Yet he remains almost unknown to the public and historians alike. While serving in Congress, he became the Father of States Rights and saw the sectional divisions in the country which exists to this day But he sought only to serve and return home to his farm work the land He wanted no praise or notice of his work burning his papers and not allowing a portrait to be painted of his likeness He only wanted a pile of rocks to mark his final resting place Macon was a protectionist in North Carolina always an Anti Federalist and true conservative not believing in debt or a standing army and navy But he was highly respected by friend and foe alike because of his unquestioned integrity and selflessness Print ed Rear
