Genetic Algorithms and Robotics Yuval Davidor, 1991 Classical optimization methodologies fall short in very large and complex domains In this book is suggested a different approach to optimization an approach which is based on the blind and heuristic mechanisms of evolution and population genetics The genetic approach to optimization introduces a new philosophy to optimization in general but particularly to engineering By introducing the genetic approach to robot trajectory generation much can be learned about the adaptive mechanisms of evolution and how these mechanisms can solve real world problems It is suggested further that optimization at large may benefit greatly from the adaptive optimization exhibited by natural systems when attempting to solve complex optimization problems and that the determinism of classical optimization models may sometimes be an obstacle in nonlinear systems This book is unique in that it reports in detail on an application of genetic algorithms to a real world problem and explains the considerations taken during the development work Furthermore it addresses robotics in two new aspects the optimization of the trajectory specification which has so far been done by human operators and has not received much attention for both automation and optimization and the introduction of a heuristic strategy to a field predominated by deterministic strategies
