Shipping the Medieval Military Craig L. Lambert, 2011 Mariners made a major but neglected contribution to England s warfare in the middle ages Here their role is examined anew showing their importance During the fourteenth century England was scarred by famine plague and warfare Through such disasters however emerged great feats of human endurance Not only did the English population recover from starvation and disease but thousands of the kingdom s subjects went on to defeat the Scots and the French in several notable battles Victories such as Halidon Hill Neville s Cross Cr cy and Poitiers not only helped to recover the pride of the English chivalrous class but also secured the reputation of Edward III and the Black Prince Yet what has been underemphasized in this historical narrative is the role played by men of more humble origins none more so than the medieval mariner This is unfortunate because during the fourteenth century the manpower and ships provided by the English merchant fleet underpinned every military expedition The aim of this book is to address this gap Its fresh approach to the sources allows the enormous contribution of the English merchant fleet to the wars conducted by Edward II and Edward III to be revealed the author also explores the complex administrative process of raising a fleet and provides career profiles for many mariners examining the familial relationships that existed in port communities and the shipping resources of English ports Craig L Lambert is Research Assistant at the University of Hull

The Cartulary of Chatteris Abbey Chatteris Abbey, 1999 Takes its place as perhaps the finest available study of a house for women religious ENGLISH HISTORICAL

REVIEWThe fifteenth century cartulary of the Benedictine nunnery of Chatteris Abbey in Cambridgeshire founded in the early eleventh century has important implications for the study of women religious especially in the light of the small number of surviving cartularies from English nunneries yet until now it has received little attention perhaps due to its damage in the Cotton Library fire of 1731 This critical edition of the manuscript which contains documents copied into it from the mid twelfth to the fifteenth centuries offers a full transcription together with historical notes and apparatus The introduction draws on the cartulary itself as well as manorial and episcopal records to analyse the nunnery s relationship with its patron the bishop of Ely and the development and management of its estates it also examines the location and layout of the abbey the social and geographical origins of the nuns and the production and organisation of the cartulary The edition is accompanied by an annotated list of all known abbesses prioresses and nuns political make up of medieval and early modern England The New Cambridge Medieval History: c. 1024-c. 1198. Renevey, 2000-01-01 This collection of commissioned essays explores women's vernacular theology through a wide range of medieval prose and verse texts from saints' lives to visionary literature. Employing a historicist methodology, the essays are sited at the intersection of two discursive fields: female spiritual practice and female textual practice. The contributors are primarily interested in the relation of women to religious books as writers, receivers, and as objects of representation. They focus on historical approaches to the question of women's spirituality and generically unrestricted examinations of issues of female literacy, book ownership, and reading practice. The essays are grouped under four main themes: the influence of anchoritic spirituality upon later lay piety; Carthusian links with female spirituality; the representation of femininity in Anglo-Norman and Middle English religious poetry; and veneration, performance, and delusion in the Book of Margery Kempe.

Common Women Ruth Mazo Karras, 1998-04-23 Through a sensitive use of a wide variety of imaginative and didactic texts, Ruth Karras shows that while prostitutes as individuals were marginalized within medieval culture, prostitution as an institution was central to the medieval understanding of what it meant to be a woman. This important work will be of interest to scholars and students of history, women's studies, and the history of sexuality. A Marginal Economy? Mark Bailey, 1989-06-29 A theory of the margin has long featured in the work of medieval historians. Marginal regions are taken to be those of poor soil or geographical remoteness where farmers experienced particular difficulties in grain production. It is argued that such regions were cultivated only when demographic pressure intensified in the thirteenth century, but that a combination of soil exhaustion and demographic decline resulted in severe economic contraction by the end of the fourteenth century. Marginal regions are seen not just as sensitive barometers of economic change but as important catalysts in that change. Despite the importance placed by historians on the general theory of the margin, this book represents the first detailed study of a marginal region. It focuses upon East Anglian Breckland, whose blowing sands are among the most barren soils in lowland England. Drawing upon a wide range of sources, this study reconstructs Breckland's late medieval economy and shows it to be more diversified and resilient than the stereotype depicted in marginal theory. Medieval Single Women Cordelia Beattie, 2007-09-13 In a culture in which marriage was the desirable norm and virginity was particularly prized in females, the categories virgin and widow held particular significance. This book investigates the uses of the category single woman. The law gave unmarried women legal rights and responsibilities that were generally withheld from married women. The pervasiveness of religion and the law in people's day-to-day lives led to a complex interplay between moral and economic concerns in how medieval women were seen. As a result, they were marked out as single women in very different contexts, and his study reveals the multiplicity of ways in which dominant cultural ideas impacted on them. Traditions and
