

RollerCoaster

The background of the cover art depicts a vibrant amusement park scene. A red roller coaster track winds through the sky and over a green landscape. In the foreground, a blue roller coaster car is shown in a sharp turn, with a young man and woman inside. The man is wearing a yellow shirt and holding a green drink, while the woman is wearing a purple shirt and also holding a green drink, with her arm raised in excitement. The overall style is colorful and cartoonish, typical of early 2000s game covers.

The Publishers Weekly ,2002      Screen Damage Michel Desmurget,2022-10-11 All forms of recreational digital consumption whether on smartphones tablets game consoles or TVs have skyrocketed in the younger generations From the age of 2 children in the West clock up more than 2 5 hours of screen time a day by the time they reach 13 it s more than 7 hours a day Added up over the first 18 years of life this is the equivalent of almost 30 school years or 15 years of full time employment Most media experts do not seem overly concerned about this situation children are adaptable they say they are digital natives their brains have changed and screens make them smarter But other specialists including some paediatricians psychiatrists teachers and speech therapists dispute these claims and many parents worry about the long term consequences of their children s intensive exposure to screens Michel Desmurget a leading neuroscientist has carefully weighed up the scientific evidence concerning the impact of the digital activities of our children and adolescents and his assessment does not make for happy reading he shows that these activities have significant detrimental consequences in terms of the health behaviour and intellectual abilities of young people and strongly affect their academic outcomes A wake up call for anyone concerned about the long term impacts of our children s over exposure to screens Also available as an audiobook
