Making A Man Of Him Parents And Their Sons Education At An English Public:

Making a Man of Him Christine Heward, 2017-06-26 Originally published in 1988 this book analyses the effect of public boarding school on those boys who grew to manhood under its influence With access to over 2000 letters written by parents to the Head Master and governors of Ellesmere College in the period 1929-50 it raises issues about the construction of masculinity in the mid twentieth century The author demonstrates from these candid letters the concerns of a small group of parents bringing up their sons their aspirations plans fears and problems She shows how parents plans changed sometimes very dramatically due to the Second World War and demonstrates the differences between social groups as diverse as clergy widows and farmers in bringing up their sons The author also presents fascinating and elusive evidence about the sons themselves and the effects of their schooling on their models of masculinity sexuality and attitudes to women This book places the particular concerns of a relatively small group within the much wider contexts of education social and gender structure

Manliness and the Boys' Story Paper in Britain: A Cultural History, 1855-1940 K. Boyd, 2002-11-04 In this pioneering work about the precursor to the comic book Kelly Boyd traces the evolution of the boys story paper and its impact on the imaginative world of working class readers From the penny dreadful and the Boy's Own Paper to the tales of Billy Bunter and Sexton Blake this cultural form shaped ideas about gender race class and empire in response to social change This study is an important analysis of a neglected part of popular culture

Empire Families Elizabeth Buettner, 2004-07 What was life like for the British men women and children who lived in late imperial India while serving the Raj Empire Families treats the Raj as a family affair and examines how and why many remained linked with India over several generations Due to the fact that India was never meant for permanent European settlement many families developed deep rooted ties with India while never formally emigrating Their lives were dominated by long periods of residence abroad punctuated by repeated travels between Britain and India childhood overseas followed by separation from parents and education in Britain adult returns to India through careers or marriage furloughs and ultimately retirement in Britain As a result many Britons neither felt themselves to be rooted in India nor felt completely at home when back in Britain Their permanent impermanence led to the creation of distinct social realities and cultural identities Empire Families sets out to recreate this society by looking at a series of families their lives in India and their travels back to Britain Focusing for the first time on the experiences of parents and children alike and including the Beveridge Butler Orwell and Kipling families Elizabeth Buettner uncovers the meanings of growing up in the Raj and an itinerant imperial lifestyle present and past fatherhoods The popular understanding of fathers in past generations as being detached and uninvolved in the lives of their children can be said to play a significant part in the construction of modern fathering identities with ideas of new fatherhood being played off against notions of historical fathering practices However research has begun to show that these popular myths often misremember the past judging it by current standards and obscuring the diverse nature of fathering practices in the recent and distant past A genealogical approach is able to critically examine these intergenerational constructions of fatherhood and more positively illuminate the ways in which experiences of fathering and being fathered are passed on between generations The contributions to this collection use a genealogical approach broadly defined to fathering and fatherhood as a way of defamiliarizing accepted narratives and suggesting new ways of thinking about men and their relationships with their children

Fashioning Masculinity Dr Michele Cohen, Michele Cohen, 2002-01-08 The fashioning of English gentlemen in the eighteenth century was modelled on French practices of sociability and conversation Michele Cohen shows how at the same time the English constructed their cultural relations with the French as relations of seduction and desire She argues that this produced anxiety on the part of the English over the effect of French practices on English masculinity and the virtue of English women By the end of the century representing the French as an effeminate other was integral to the forging of English masculine national identity Michele Cohen examines the derogation of women and the French which accompanied the emergent masculine English identity While taciturnity became emblematic of the English gentleman's depth of mind and masculinity sprightly conversation was seen as representing the shallow and inferior intellect of English women and the French of both sexes Michele Cohen also demonstrates how visible evidence of girls verbal and language learning skills served only to construe the female mind as inferior She argues that this perception still has currency today
