

How to hold a camera

It's worth taking a few minutes to practise holding your camera before you start shooting – you'll get sharper shots

FINGER
The camera body is designed to be gripped with your right hand and your index finger over the shutter release. You should be able to operate the shutter without having to reposition your grip.

HAND
Buck your wrist in your left hand. This stabilises the camera. Buck the back of the wrist to exert an extra force with the hand. Making your right hand to grip the camera firmly.

ELBOWS
Tuck your elbows into your body to brace your camera steady. The further out your elbows are, the more unstable you will be.

EYEBROW CONTACT
Lift the camera with your left and rest the shoulder against your chest. This creates another point of contact on the body for more stability.

BACK PANEL CONTROL
With your hands in the correct position, your thumb is well placed to access the controls on the back of the camera after the shooting settings.

PORTRAIT
If you normally shoot your camera in portrait, it's worth practising the other way around your arms will become accustomed to it.

LEGS
Place your legs with feet apart to your shoulder. If you're standing in a line, it's best to stand with feet apart to create a sturdier body shape.

TAKE A MAT
When standing to take more pictures, you might give out on your knees. Take a mat or a piece of fabric to place under your feet for comfort while maintaining your stance.

REST ELBOWS
If you have a stiff neck, rest your elbows on a surface to steady yourself. Look for a table or bench, but be careful not to rest.

CONTROL YOUR BREATHING
Breathe out when you take a shot. If you hold your breath or breathe in, you'll find your most accurate shot. It's amazing how much the difference controlling your breathing can make.

BRING ONE LEG UP
By sitting or kneeling on a cushioned surface and bringing one leg up to your chest, your body is more stable. Place your elbow on your knee to connect your leg and arm together, creating a solid position on your feet without ground.

LEAN IN
Leaning against a wall or other solid support for your camera. This can be useful when shooting in low shutter speeds without a tripod.
