Howells,2018-06-18 In the fall of the year 1850 my father removed with his family from the city of D where we had been living to a property on the Little Miami River to take charge of a saw mill and grist mill and superintend their never accomplished transformation into paper mills The property belonged to his brothers physicians and druggists who were to follow later when they had disposed of their business in town My father left a disastrous newspaper enterprise behind him when he came out to apply his mechanical taste and his knowledge of farming to the care of their place Early in the century his parents had brought him to Ohio from Wales and his boyhood was passed in the new country where pioneer customs and traditions were still rife and for him it was like renewing the wild romance of those days to take up once more the life in a log cabin interrupted by forty years sojourn in matter of fact dwellings of frame and brick He had a passion for nature as tender and genuine and as deeply moralized as that of the English poets by whom it had been nourished and he taught us children all that he felt for the woods and fields and open skies all our walks had led into them and under them It was the fond dream of his boys to realize the trials and privations which he had painted for them in such rosy hues and even if the only clap boarded dwelling on the property had not been occupied by the miller we should have disdained it for the log cabin in which we took up our home till we could build a new house Our cabin stood close upon the road but behind it broadened a cornfield of eighty acres They still built log cabins for dwellings in that region forty years ago but ours must have been nearly half a century old when we went into it It had been recently vacated by an old Virginian couple who had long occupied it and we decided that it needed some repairs to make it habitable even for a family inured to hardship by dauntless imaginations and accustomed to retrospective discomforts of every kind My Year in a Log Cabin William Dean Howells, 2010
