Mystras Manolēs Chatzēdakēs, 1981 Chatzidakis scrutinizes the first evidence for Mystras before the Frankish Conquest of 1249 the city's acme under the Franks from 1249 to 1262 and subsequently in the days of the Kantakouzenoi and the Palaiologoi and again when as capital of the Despotate of the Morea from 1348 to 1460 Mystras became the centre and very soul of the Peloponnese a city in constant communication politically and culturally with the capital of the Byzantine Empire Constantinople itself And indeed the rich decoration of Mystras churches the Metropolis the Aphenliko the Peribleptos or the Pantanassa for instance is a brilliant example of Constantinople's art at its greatest Chatzidakis also has a chapter about each of the monuments and its architecture painting and sculptured decoration with notes on the minor chapels The Castle the walls the palaces and the houses the indispensable framework for a better understanding of the art of Byzantine Mystras are examined in the last part of the book This new edition retains the author's original text in its original form comprising a detailed study of the monuments and the city over the centuries All that is new is the additions and adjustments made necessary by recent findings the result of conservation and restoration work on the archaeological site by the Fifth Ephorate of Byzantine Antiquities Sparta Essential additions have also been made to the chapter on the Museum these are due to the recent new exhibition on display since 2001 and in particular to the conservation and study of the dress of the Byzantine princess This edition also has the benefit of new photographs of the site and the monuments Mystras Manolēs Chatzēdakēs, 1981

An Obscure Portrait Mati Meyer, 2007-12-31 Recent discussions on Byzantine art have been dominated by the question of representing realia Among these however the way works of art reflect the daily life of women have not received much space or attention The present book studies various images representing women's status and her performative tasks and their significance from the fourth century to the fall of the Empire through analysis of archaeological evidence and works of art It addresses a wide range of questions some pertaining both to pictorial traditions and to their late antique antecedents others peculiar to changing and evolving Byzantine culture and mentality The first chapter deals with the imagery of childbearing starting with conception and concluding with the care given to the new born and the mother The second chapter investigates motherhood imagery breastfeeding child care and child mother intimacy and the portrayal of women as caretakers and managers of the household preparing food bringing water carding and weaving or working side by side with their husbands The third chapter is dedicated to representations of women holding positions outside the house midwives maidservants wet nurses and mourners Images of women engaged in disreputable occupations dancers musicians prostitutes and courtesans complete this chapter The fourth chapter discusses images of women portrayed in the metaphorical margins looking out from the gynaikeion the women's apartments or at their private toilette it also deals with representations of women who stray from the societal mainstream concubines adulteresses women consenting to sexual acts or being coerced into them considered symbolically as belonging to the margins of society The book concludes with a discussion of the degree to which the visual material reliably reflects reality and changing attitudes toward women between Late Antiquity and late Byzantium and further to what extent it reveals embedded perceptions and conceptions of women constructed by canonic regulations and imperial law popular beliefs and accepted customs The book aims to lift a veil from known and less known works of art and to present the rarely described picture of the daily life of women in Byzantine art over a very wide chronological span of time in an effort to expand our knowledge of women in Byzantium and their realia
