Religion as Social Capital Corwin E. Smidt,2003 While Robert Putnam s Bowling Alone 2000 highlighted the notion of volunteerism little attention has been paid to religion s role in generating social capital an ironic omission since religion constitutes the most common form of voluntary association in America today Featuring essays by prominent social scientists this is the first book length systematic examination of the relationship between religion and social capital and what effects religious social capital has on democratic life in the United States

Civil Society and the Reform of Finance Charles McDaniel, Jr.,2015-07-16 Efforts to resolve the recent financial crisis have obscured a more deeply rooted financialization crisis that impacts not only the market economy but also the vital civic and moral traditions that support it This book reveals the cultural influence of finance in reshaping the foundations of American civil society and proposes a return to certain first principles of the Republic to restore the nation s economic vision This book demonstrates how funding concerns and financial incentives revalue faith traditions educational institutions non profit organizations and even the nation s healthcare system in ways that are eroding the diversity of American culture These changes also undermine the ethical framework of both democratic government and the free market system While financial influence has diminished the value of civil society this book proposes that revitalized intermediary institutions still offer the best path forward in restoring the financial sector and more broadly enriching the American competitive ethic toward development of a more virtuous economy The book is written for an academic and professional audience offering a blueprint for the involvement of civil society with government in providing more communally integrated oversight that could contribute to a genuine democratization of finance

Civil Society and Democratization Isidro Morales, Guillermo De los Reyes, Paul Rich, 1999-09 At the end of the Cold War a renewed interest in civil society emerged Today civil society trust democratization social capital and volunteerism are a primary focus among the social sciences The end of the Cold War meant such issues in the social sciences neglected during many years of military confrontation came back into prominence Voluntary groups are being given large roles and the state is being challenged by them The search is on for ways to encourage democracy Free trade and globalization are part of the equation but much attention is being focused on the role of NGOs non governmental organizations The claim is that without a healthy voluntary sector the long term survival of a democratic society is doubtful Civil Society and Democratization a special issue of THE ANNALS features articles written by both domestic and international scholars on this ever growing area of discussion Articles in this issue cover these important topics Debates on civil society both in the United States and abroad Civil society and political elections Religion and civic engagement Civil society and volunteerism This special issue is a comprehensive discussion of how political confidence is built and eroded in a world that unimaginable only ten years ago It is an indispensable guide to the problems of sustaining the gains made by democracy since the collapse of the Soviet Union and will be of great interest to academics and professionals concerned with processes of social change Choosing Schools

Mark Schneider, Paul Teske, Melissa Marschall, 2002-04-07 School choice seeks to create a competitive arena in which public schools will attain academic excellence encourage individual student performance and achieve social balance In debating the feasibility of this market approach to improving school systems analysts have focused primarily on schools as suppliers of education but an important question remains Will parents be able to function as smart consumers on behalf of their children Here a highly respected team of social scientists provides extensive empirical evidence on how parents currently do make these choices Drawn from four different types of school districts in New York City and suburban New Jersey their findings not only stress the importance of parental decision making and involvement to school performance but also clarify the issues of school choice in ways that bring much needed balance to the ongoing debate The authors analyze what parents value in education how much they know about schools how well they can match what they say they want in schools with what their children get how satisfied they are with their children s schools and how their involvement in the schools is affected by the opportunity to choose They discover most notably that low income parents value education as much as if not more than high income parents but do not have access to the same quality of school information This problem comes under sensitive thorough scrutiny as do a host of other important topics from school performance to segregation to children at risk of being left behind □□□□□□□□, 2006-11
