Raptor Research and Management Techniques Keith L. Bildstein, David Michael Bird, 2007 Think about how we know about past events in human history e g the expansion of the Roman Empire or the American Revolution What types of records document those events Now think about Earth s history specifically the past environmental or climatic conditions at times before recorded human history What records might there be of such conditions Make a list of your ideas n assemblage of five major types of natural archives of Earth s environmental and climatic history What common feature s do each of these paleoclimate archives share an assemblage of 5 major types of natural records or archives of Earth s environmental and climatic history Just like a diary or other historical document the layers in these natural archives contain indirect evidence i e proxies about past conditions and events recorded in a sequential order The evidence is specific to a certain time period and may be general or very detailed depending on the rate that information was recorded The faster the rate at which the recorder grew trees and corals accumulated snow and ice or was deposited sedimentary sequences the more detailed the record is and the higher its resolution For example a record in which an annual signal can be observed has a very high resolution In contrast if the finest observable details are on the order of a million years then that record would have a low resolution

The Ecology of Transportation: Managing Mobility for the Environment John Davenport, Julia L. Davenport, 2006-06-30 Human transport by land sea and air has increased exponentially through time in intensity paralleling rises in population prosperity and rates of technological change Transport has considerable ecological effects many of them detrimental to environmental sustainability This volume brings together international experts from a variety of disciplines to review the ecological effects and their causes in terms of road rail ship and aircraft transport The contributors have different attitudes and agendas Some are ecologists some planners others social scientists Focus ranges from identification of threats and amelioration of damaging effects through to future design of transport systems to minimize environmental degradation Some chapters consider restricted areas of the globe others the globe itself Views encompass deep pessimism and cautious optimism

Neotropical Birds of Prey David Whitacre, 2013-05-15 Until recently surprisingly little has been known about the biology and behavior of tropical forest raptors including such basic aspects as diets breeding biology habitat requirements and population ecology information critical to the development of conservation efforts The Peregrine Fund conducted a significant eight year long research program on the raptor species including owls in Tikal National Park in Guatemala to learn more about Neotropical birds of prey Impressive and unprecedented in scale this pioneering research also involved the development of new methods for detecting enumerating and studying these magnificent but often elusive birds in their forest home Beautifully illustrated with photographs of previously little known species the resulting book is the most important single source for information on the lowland tropical forest raptor species found in Central America Neotropical Birds of Prey covers twenty specific species in depth including the Ornate Hawk Eagle the Barred Forest Falcon the Bat Falcon and the Mexican Wood Owl offering thorough synopses of all current knowledge regarding breeding biology and behavior diet habitat use and spatial needs Contributors to this landmark work also show how the populations fit together as a community with overlapping habitat and prey needs that can put them in competition with reptiles and mammalian carnivores as well yet differ from one another in their nesting or feeding behaviors and population dynamics The work's substantive original data offer interesting comparisons between tropical and temperate zone species and provide a basis for establishing conservation measures based on firsthand research Making available for the first time new data on the biology ecology behavior and conservation of the majestic owls and raptors of the New World tropics this book will appeal to a wide ornithological readership especially the many raptor enthusiasts around the world Migrating Raptors of the World Keith L. Bildstein, 2017-05-02 Raptors are formally classified into five families and include birds such as eagles ospreys kites true hawks buzzards harriers vultures and falcons that are familiar and recognized by many observers These diurnal birds of prey are found on every continent except Antarctica and can thrive in seemingly inhospitable spots such as deserts and the tundra They have powerful talons and hooked beaks for cutting and tearing meat and keen binocular vision to aid in their hunting prowess. Because of their large size, distinctive feeding habits and long distance flight patterns, raptors intrigue humans and have been the subject of much general interest as well as extensive scientific research. Keith L. Bildstein has watched and studied raptors on five continents and is well prepared to explain their critical importance not only as ecological entities but also as inspirational tokens across natural and human dominated landscapes. His book offers a comprehensive and accessible account of raptors including their evolutionary history, their relationships to other groups of birds, their sensory abilities, their general natural history, their breeding ecology and feeding behavior, and threats to their survival in a human dominated world. Biologically sound but readable, Raptors is a nontechnical overview of this captivating group. It will allow naturalists, birders, hawk watchers, science educators, schoolchildren and the general public along with new students in the field of raptor biology to understand and appreciate these birds and in so doing better protect them.

Raptors at Risk World Working Group on Birds of Prey and Owls, 2000. Proceedings of the V World Conference on Birds of Prey and Owls. There are still few studies of the long term dynamics of a complete raptor community, least of all in the tropics. In Africa, the pioneering population monitoring of eagles in Kenya by Brown and in Zimbabwe by Gargett are noteworthy. Furthermore, the consequences of habitat fragmentation and isolation on bird communities, currently a deep concern, have been thoroughly analyzed in temperate forests as well as in tropical forests but rarely in Africa and never specifically on a raptor community. Reserves that protect natural habitat patches are often bound to become isolated within a matrix of initially similar but soon degraded habitat increasingly unsuitable for at least some species that eventually survive only in the reserve. Moreover, edge effects add their negative consequences to those of isolation and further imperil the survival of small populations. This process, well known in forest fragments, may also occur in grasslands. Raptors are highly sensitive to prey availability, vegetation structure, pollution and human disturbance and thus are good indicators of environmental changes.

Population Ecology of Raptors Ian Newton, 2010-11-30. Dr Newton's book is concerned with all aspects of population regulation in diurnal birds of prey: their social behaviour, dispersion, numbers, movements, breeding and mortality. He has drawn on his own studies in Scotland and on material and investigations worldwide to produce an authoritative and stimulating synthesis of current thinking and research on the ecological problems of the Falconiformes. He also deals in detail with the effects of pesticides and other pollutants on these birds and with their scientific management and conservation. The author's lucid style will ensure a wide readership among research workers and the more general audience with an interest in birds of prey. There is a full bibliography and an extensive appendix of tables.

A Field Guide to the Raptors of Europe, the Middle East, and North Africa William S. Clark, 1999. Birds of prey are among the most imposing and spectacular birds to be found in Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. Many of these field marks are the result of his own extensive experience in classifying raptors and most have never before been published Clark has been observing studying writing about and photographing raptors for over thirty years And his passion for birds of prey has taken him around the world making him uniquely qualified to write this book He presents a forty page color photograph section in addition to detailed facts about each bird providing the essential clues to identification These include plumage descriptions for each age sex and color change as well as descriptions of flight molt behavior and distribution for every species With forty eight stunning color plates especially painted for this volume it depicts all the plumage for every raptor found in the Western Palearctic region both regularly occurring and vagrant Also contained in this guide are useful sections on similar species and how to distinguish them and each account concludes with the range of measurements for length wing span and weight This guide is essential for all ornithologists or any birdwatcher who wants to accurately identify the region s raptors Raptors in the Modern World Bernd-U.
