

The Plenitude We Cry For

A Poem by Sandra Appleton

"I know of no work quite like it, for the unfolding organic feminine attentive realization of a natural object, both direct and associative. Rilke entered on things in a similar way but not at this length."

John Berryman

With an Introduction by George Darley ... A New Edition Francis Beaumont, 1851 First Things Mary Jacobus, 2020-04-03 In First Things Mary Jacobus combines close readings with theoretical concerns in an examination of the many forms taken by the mythic or phantasmic mother in literary psychoanalytic and artistic representations She carefully explores the ways in which the maternal imaginary informs both unconscious processes and signifying practices at all levels Her fierce analysis of specific texts and paintings raises questions about the the symbolic and biological maternal body and how they relate to each other in literary and psychoanalytic terms The invocation of writings by Kleist Wollstonecraft Mary Shelley Malthus and de Sade along with analysis of French revolutionary iconography and Realist and Impressionist paintings by Eakins and Morisot make this wide ranging text a truly interdisciplinary study First Things sees literary theory and psychoanalysis as mutually illuminating practices The work of Freud Klein Kristeva and Bion shape an inquiry into such topics as population discourse surrogate motherhood AIDS mastectomy and psychoanalysis itself In addition Jacobus elaborates on Freud's oedipal preconceptions Klein's missing theory of signs memory melancholia narcissism and maternal reverie Reforging the Great Chain of Being Simo Knuuttila, 2013-03-14 A sports reporter might say that in a competition all the participants realize their potentialities or possibilities When an athlete performs far below his usual standard it can be said that it was possible for him to do better But the idea of fair play requires that this use of possible refers to another competition It is presumed that the best athlete wins and that no real possibility of doing better is left unrealized in a competition Here we have a use of language a language game in which modal notions are used so as to imply that if something is possible it is realized This idea does not belong to the general presuppositions of current ordinary usage It is nevertheless not difficult to find other similar examples outside of the language of sports It may be that such a use of modal notions is sometimes calculated to express that in the context in question there are no real alternative courses of events in contradistinction to other cases in which some possible alternatives remain unrealized Even though modal notions are currently interpreted without the presupposition that each genuine possibility should be realized at some moment of the actual history there are contemporary philosophical models of modalities which incorporate this presupposition In his book Untersuchungen über den Modalkalkül Anton Hain Meisenheim am Glan 1952 pp 16 36 Oscar Becker presents a statistical interpretation of modal calculi American Women Writers: Supplement Lina Mainiero, 1979 Mazzini, and Other Essays Henry Demarest Lloyd, 1910 Leaves from st.
