Department of the Army,Military Library Research Service (Firm),2005 Soviet Defensive Tactics At Kursk, July 1943 Colonel David M Glantz,2015-11-06 In his classic work On War Carl von Clausewitz wrote As we shall show defense is a stronger form of fighting than attack A generation of nineteenth century officers nurtured on the study of the experiences of Napoleon and conditioned by the wars of German unification had little reason to accept that view The offensive spirit swept through European armies and manifested itself in the regulations plans and mentality of those armiehe events of 1939 1940 and 1941 in Poland France and Russia respectively again challenged Clausewitz claim of the superiority of the defense and prompted armies worldwide to frantically field large armored forces and develop doctrines for their use While blitzkrieg concepts ruled supreme it fell to that nation victimized

most by those concepts to develop techniques to counter the German juggernaut The Soviets had to temper a generation of offensive tradition in order to marshal forces and develop techniques to counter blitzkrieg In essence the Soviet struggle for survival against blitzkrieg proved also to be a partial test of Clausewitz dictum In July 1943 after arduous months of developing defensive techniques often at a high cost in terms of men and material the Soviets met blitzkrieg head on and proved that defense against it was feasible The titanic grinding Kursk operation validated in part Clausewitz views But it also demonstrated that careful study of force organization and employment and application of the fruits of that study can produce either offensive or defensive victory While on the surface the events of Kursk seemed to validate Clausewitz view it is often forgotten that at Kursk the Soviets integrated the concept of counteroffensive into their grand defensive designs Thus the defense itself was meaningless unless viewed against the backdrop of the renewed offensive efforts and vice versa What Kursk did prove was that strategic operational and tactical defenses could counter blitzkrieg "We Made a Mistake" - Hitler Lucien Zacharoff, 1941 German Report Series Anon, 2018-05-23 By means of short narratives based on actual experiences this study describes the characteristics of Russian Breakthroughs and the countermeasures employed by the Germans A few combat narratives contain other than strictly tactical details to convey some of the emotional factors which affected the actions of troop commanders and their men Why Fight On? The Decision to Close the Kursk Salient, 2004 The Battle of Kursk in July of 1943 was a pivotal battle in the Russian German conflict 1941 1945 After the German attack failed the Russians responded with a major offensive and gained the strategic initiative From then on the German army was only capable of a series of defensive stopping actions in failed attempts to thwart the advancing Red Army The inevitable outcome was the fall of Berlin in May of 1945 There were a number of options Hitler and the German high command could have chosen in lieu of attack The decision to choose offensive action becomes even more interesting upon examination of Germany's strategic situation Tunisia the last vestige of the German occupation of North Africa was lost and Allied offensive action on the European continent was a real and imminent threat There were also attrition issues production problems and differences of opinion between Hitler and key German generals Finally the northern and southern shoulders of the Kursk salient the chosen points of attack were heavily defended What compelled Hitler and the German High Command to take such a gamble What were the strategic issues that guided this decision Was the outcome decisive And finally what other actions might have altered the outcome of the conflict
