

"Tina, there's a school talent show in three weeks," I shouted to my best friend. My older brother had been teaching me juggling, and I knew he'd help me with my act for the show.

Tina ran over to the bulletin board and read the poster. "Maura, what's our act going to be?" Tina asked me.

"Our act?" I said, taking a tighter grip on my books.

Tina grinned, pointed to the poster and said "It says acts can be individuals, partners, or small groups."

My grip on my books became uncomfortably tight. "You want to do an act together?"

"It'll be fun," Tina said.

I hesitated for a second before continuing. "I've got an idea and. . ."

Tina interrupted me. "Yeah, me too; let's talk at lunch."

During math, I tried to think of how I would tell Tina that I wanted to do my own act. After all, we are best friends; we should be able to see eye to eye about this. The problem is Tina always takes charge, I don't speak up, and then I end up feeling resentful about the whole situation.

I desperately wanted to win, but it was more than that. I wanted to win on my own—with an act that was all mine.
