

THE 5 SENSES

READING COMPREHENSION

We experience the world around us through our five senses. The senses are: smell, sight, taste, touch and hearing. The senses collect information through receptors cells, and send it to our brain.

We smell through our nose, hear through our ear, see through our eyes, touch through our skin and taste through both our senses of taste and smell. Next time you're eating something, hold your nose and assess if it tastes the same. Likewise, when we have a cold and our noses are blocked, our food taste more bland. Our tongues can detect four different types of taste - sweet, salty, sour and bitter.

Certain areas of our skin have more receptors than others, meaning that those parts are more sensitive, such as our lips and fingers.

If someone is not able to use all their senses, they may be blind (can't see), or deaf (can't hear).

1 How do messages about the world reach our brain? _____

2 Describe each of the following using one of the four types of taste: sour, sweet, salty, bitter:

Pretzel: _____

Brussel sprouts: _____

Lemon: _____

Strawberry: _____

3 Name an area of your skin that is less sensitive than another area, and how you know this to be so: _____

4 If you had to live without one of your five senses, which one would you choose and why?
