Dumas's Celebrated Crimes was not written for children. The novelist has spared no language, has minced no words to describe the violent scenes of a violent time. In some instances facts appear distorted out of their true perspective and in others the author makes unwarranted charges. It is not within our province to edit the historical side of Dumas any more than it would be to correct the obvious errors in Dickens's Child's History of England. The careful, mature reader for whom the books are intended will recognize and allow for this fact.

Celebrated Crimes

CHAPTER I Before beginning our story we must warn the reader that it will not be worth his while to make researches among contemporary or other records as to the personage whose name it bears. For in truth neither Marie Leroux, widow of Jacques Constantin, nor her accomplice Claude Perregaud was of sufficient importance to find a place on any list of great criminals, although it is certain that they were guilty of the crimes with which they were charged. It may seem strange that what follows is more a history of the retribution which overtook the criminals than a circumstantial description of the deeds for which they were punished.

1 Claude Perregaud

CHAPTER IX It was proved that they had amassed immense fortunes in the exercise of their infamous calling. The entries in the books seized at their house, though sparse, would have led, if made public, to scandals involving many in high places. It was therefore judged best to limit the accusation to the two deaths by blood poisoning of Angelique de Querchi and Charlotte Boullenois.
