Playing With Form Children Draw In Six Cultures:

Playing With Form Alexander Alland, 1983 Presents the first published cross cultural analysis of children's drawing in which the data from several cultures were collected under controlled conditions and in which children were filmed in the process of making pictures

Playing with Form Alexander Alland, 1983 The development of the child's ability to draw is an inherently fascinating and complex subject Many theories have been proposed to explain this development but until now no one has undertaken a cross cultural controlled study of children in the act of drawing Playing with Form is the first empirical study of children drawing in diverse cultures Alexander Alland Jr spent eight months observing and filming children six cultures Japan Bali Taiwan Ponape France and the U S as they drew Attempting to determine the accuracy of current generalizations about the development of drawing skills as well as to understand the step by step process of drawing Alland amassed 240 drawings 100 of which are reproduced here by children ranging from two to eight years old The author uses this wealth of primary material to dispute much current thinking about children's drawing particular theories about specific universal stages of development While he does suggest some general rules which underlie the process of drawing Alland argues that cultural differences reflect rules which are specific to the culture in which children play with form An invaluable first step toward understanding the exact role culture plays in the development of style in children's drawing Playing with Form will be of fundamental interest to anthropologists developmental psychologists art historians and elementary school teachers back cover both disciplines had largely ignored a crucial problem area the way in which children from birth onwards learn to become competent members of their culture This process which has been called the quintessential human adaptation constitutes the theme of this volume originally published in 1988 It derives from a workshop held at the London School of Economics which brought together fieldworkers who in their studies had paid more than usual attention to children in their cultures Their experience and foci of interest were varied but this very diversity serves to illuminate different facets of the acquisition of culture by children ranging in age from pre verbal infants to adolescents Evolutionarily primed for culture learning children are responsive to a rich web of influences from subtle and indirect as in their music and dance to direct teaching in the family guided by culture specific ideas about child psychology Some of the salient things they learn relate to gender status and power critical for the functioning of all societies The introductory essay provides the necessary historical background of the development of child study in both anthropology and psychology and outlined how future research in the ethnography of childhood should proceed The book concludes with an annotated bibliography providing a guide to the literature from 1970 onwards
