These basic foundational understandings on the neurobiology underlying the disorder, along with a comprehensive summary of the most recent advances in research, are combined in this book to aid advanced students and researchers in their understanding of MDD. Depression is one of the most common mental health disorders caused by a variety of genetic, biological, environmental, and psychological factors. Major depressive disorder (MDD) is typically treated with first-line antidepressant agents that primarily target monoamine neurotransmission. However, only approximately one-third of patients with MDD achieve remission following a trial with such an antidepressant. Furthermore, MDD is a heterogeneous phenotype, and new frameworks such as the NIMH Research Domain Criteria (RDoC) may provide a more accurate, biologically based comprehension of the symptomatic heterogeneity of this devastating illness Aids readers in understanding major depressive disorder in the context of NIMH Research Domain Criteria RDoC recommendations Covers a range of existing and potential pharmacologic and non pharmacologic treatment options from lifestyle adjustments to antidepressants and novel therapeutics Synthesizes discussions on the cellular and molecular mechanisms underlying symptoms with the clinical aspects of depression
