contemporary audiences have formed very different images of Iceland through the vocal music and music videos of Björk and Sigur Rós. Just below the Arctic Circle Icelandic men engage in more everyday vocal practices where singing literally for oneself is an everyday life skill set against a backdrop of unique natural historical economic and social phenomena. Their sagas of song and singing are the subject of this book. The original Icelandic Sagas among the most important collections of medieval European literature are valued for richly detailed portrayals of individual lives. This book's principle protagonists and collaborators share a heritage where Sagas remain central to national and local identity. While the oral traditions associated with them were largely overwhelmed by European romanticism just over a hundred years ago, ironically this new vocal music became a key technology for national renewal. Written by an immigrant musician who lived in a remote Icelandic community for over twenty years, this volume focuses upon individual and collective stories about singing as personal and social work. Drawing upon everyday ethnographic and sociological studies of music and emerging discourse about musical identity, the study uses anthropological historical and musicological evidence in thinking about songs, singing, and Self and the genderedness of this particular singing practice.
