Protecting Aboriginal Children:

Protecting Aboriginal Children Chris Walmsley, 2011-11-01 Beginning in the 1960s large numbers of Aboriginal children in Canada were removed from their families by provincial child welfare services Known as the sixties scoop the practice caused great harm to individuals and families and devastated communities Today Aboriginal children comprise roughly half the children in state care but since the 1980s bands and tribal councils have developed unique community based child welfare services to better protect Aboriginal children Protecting Aboriginal Children explores contemporary approaches to the protection of Aboriginal children through interviews with practising social workers employed at Aboriginal child welfare organizations and the child protection service in British Columbia It places current practice in a sociohistorical context describes emerging practice in decolonizing communities and identifies the effects of political and media controversy on social workers This is the first book to document emerging practice in Aboriginal communities and describe child protection practice simultaneously from the point of view of the Aboriginal and non Aboriginal social worker Those working in child welfare or contemplating a career in child protection will find the book an insightful analysis of current practice thinking and experience Aboriginal peoples with an interest in health and human services as well as social work students child welfare workers and administrators and health education and human service professionals will find it particularly useful

Aboriginal Child Welfare, Self-government and the Rights of Indigenous Children Sonia Harris-Short, 2012 This volume addresses the contentious and topical issue of aboriginal self government over child welfare Using case studies from Australia and Canada it discusses aboriginal child welfare in historical and comparative perspectives and critically examines recent legal reforms and changes in the design management and delivery of child welfare services aimed at securing the decolonization of aboriginal children and families Within this context the author identifies the limitations of reconciling the conflicting demands of self determination and sovereignty and suggests that international law can provide more nuanced and culturally sensitive solutions Referring to the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child it is argued that the effective decolonization of aboriginal child welfare requires a journey well beyond the single issue of child welfare to the heart of the debate over self government self determination and sovereignty in both national and international law pub desc

Herrenkohl, 2019-04-26 This volume provides readers around the globe with a focused and comprehensive examination of how to prevent and respond to child maltreatment using evidence informed public health approaches and programs that meet the needs of vulnerable children and struggling families and communities It outlines the system failures of contemporary forensically driven child protection practice Detailed guidance is provided about how to re think earlier intervention strategies and establish stronger and more effective programs and services that prevent maltreatment at the population level Service user and stakeholder perspectives particularly from marginalized groups including Indigenous peoples highlight how public health approaches can better support families and keep children safe Case studies from different countries grapple with the fraught nature of large system change and the various strategies needed to effect multi level reforms Presenting the reader with an array of innovative services used in different institutional and community context this volume confronts the complex challenges found in implementing successful prevention programs that are aligned with diverse cultural and political environments and community expectations

Decolonising Indigenous Child Welfare Terri Libesman, 2013-12-04 During the past decade a remarkable transference of responsibility to Indigenous children s organisation has taken place in many parts of Australia Canada the USA and New Zealand It has been influenced by Indigenous peoples human rights advocacy at national and international levels by claims to self determination and by the globalisation of Indigenous children s organisations Thus far this reform has taken place with little attention from academic and non Indigenous communities now Decolonising Indigenous Child Welfare Comparative Perspectives considers these developments and evaluating law reform with respect to Indigenous child welfare asks whether the pluralisation of responses to their welfare and well being within a cross cultural post colonial context can improve the lives of Indigenous children The legislative frameworks for the delivery of child welfare services to Indigenous children are assessed in terms of the degree of self determination which they afford Indigenous communities The book draws upon interdisciplinary research and the author s experience collaborating with the peak

Australian Indigenous children's organisation for over a decade to provide a thorough examination of this international issue. Dr Terri Libesman is a Senior Lecturer in the Law Faculty at the University of Technology Sydney. She has collaborated researched and published for over a decade with the peak Australian Indigenous children's organisation.

People, Politics, and Child Welfare in British Columbia Leslie T. Foster, Brian Wharf, 2011-11-01. People Politics and Child Welfare in British Columbia traces the evolution of policies and programs intended to protect children in BC from neglect and abuse. Analyzing this evolution reveals that child protection policy and practice has reflected the priorities of politicians and public servants in power. With few exceptions, efforts to establish effective programs have focused on structural arrangements, staffing responsibilities, and rules to regulate the practice of child welfare workers. Contributors to this book conclude that these attempts have been unsuccessful thus far because they have failed to address the impact of poverty on clients. The need to respect the cultural traditions and values of First Nations clients has also been ignored. Effective services require recognizing and remedying poverty's impact, establishing community control over services, and developing a radically different approach to the day-to-day practice of child welfare workers. People Politics and Child Welfare in British Columbia provides a crucial assessment of the state of child welfare in the province. Practitioners, scholars, and students in social work, child and youth care, education, and other human service professions will find this book particularly important.

Protecting Children Kathleen Kufeldt, Barbara Fallon, Brad McKenzie, 2021-06-25. Focusing on children who are subject to welfare intervention, Protecting Children addresses the challenges and issues of the child welfare system and provides foundational knowledge on the theoretical and practical aspects of the field. This edited collection begins with a review of key concepts including child development, attachment, and resilience theories, social policies, family law, and ethics. Highlighting the translation of theory into practice, the contributors discuss current services and the search for best practice internationally, as well as explore Indigenous child welfare and offer conclusions and recommendations to promote positive outcomes for children and families involved in the system. Scholars, researchers, and practitioners from across the globe provide insight on a wide range of timely issues such as the risk of reductionism, limits to predictability, pragmatic issues, as well as the disproportional presence in the care system of minority groups including Indigenous children, children of new immigrants, and refugees, children in LGBTQ communities, and children of the poor. This foundational volume is an important resource for courses in social work and child welfare.
