sporadic but vicious with fewer than 2 000 IRA volunteers facing over 50 000 crown forces The IRA depended upon energetic local leaders where there were none there was little fighting      States of Mind Oliver MacDonagh, 2024-10-01 Originally published in 1983 and slightly revised in 1985 joint winner of the Christopher Ewart Biggs Memorial Prize States of Mind is an exploration of the ideas underlying Anglo Irish conflict over the past two centuries This is a book about nationalism and colonialism and above all about political ideology The ideology is popular to be inferred from behaviour rather than found in treatises Often it was and is expressed in images and slogans The resultant cross purposes and double meanings ambiguity and dualism are characteristic of cultural collision and accommodation generally This book throws light upon a very wide range of modern history and not just upon the relations of one particular metropolitan power and its dependency The definition and treatment of the subject as well as the conclusions are strikingly novel
