Protest Policy Problem Of Violence Against Women:

Protest, Policy, and the Problem of Violence against Women S. Laurel Weldon, 2013-12-09 Violence against women is one of the most insidious social ills facing the world today Yet governmental response is inconsistent ranging from dismissal to aggressive implementation of policies and programs to combat the problem In her comparative study of thirty six democratic governments Laurel Weldon examines the root causes and consequences of the differences in public policy from Northern Europe to Latin America She reveals that factors that often influence the development of social policies do not determine policies on violence against women Neither economic level religion region nor the number of women in government determine governmental responsiveness to this problem Weldon demonstrates for example that Nordic governments take no more action to combat violence against women than Latin American governments even though the Swedish welfare state is often considered a leader in social policy particularly with regard to women s issues Instead the presence of independently organized active women s movements plays a greater role in placing violence against women on the public agenda The breadth and scope of governmental response is greatly enhanced by the presence of an office dedicated to promoting women s status Weldon closes with practical lessons and insights to improve government action on violence against women and other important issues of social justice and democracy

Race, Gender, and Political Representation Beth Reingold, Kerry L. Haynie, Kirsten Widner, 2020-10-16 It is well established that the race and gender of elected representatives influence the ways in which they legislate but surprisingly little research exists on how race and gender interact to affect who is elected and how they behave once in office How do race and gender affect who gets elected as well as who is represented What issues do elected representatives prioritize Does diversity in representation make a difference Race Gender and Political Representation takes up the call to think about representation in the United States as intersectional and it measures the extent to which political representation is simultaneously gendered and raced Specifically the book examines how race and gender interact to affect the election behavior and impact of all individuals By putting women of color at the center of their analysis and re evaluating traditional single axis approaches to studying the politics of race or gender the authors demonstrate what an intersectional approach to identity politics can reveal Drawing on original data on the presence policy leadership and policy impact of Black women and men Latinas and Latinos and White women and men in state legislative office in the late twentieth and early twenty first centuries each chapter shows how the politics of race gender and representation are far more complex than recurring Year of the Woman frameworks suggest An array of race gender similarities and differences are evident in the experiences activities and accomplishments of these state legislators Yet one thing is clear the representation of those marginalized by multiple intersecting systems of power and inequality is intricately bound to the representation of women of color      Representation Maria C.

Escobar-Lemmon, Michelle M. Taylor-Robinson, 2014-05-14 While there is a vast literature on women's political interests there is hardly any consensus about what constitutes women's interests or how scholars should approach studying them Representation can occur in various venues or by various actors but due to power imbalances across political groups it is not always realized in any substantive way The essays in this book constitute a broad and geographically comparative move toward defining new and unified theoretical orientations to studying representation among women Representation involves not only getting group members into government but also articulating group interests and translating those interests into policy Because competing groups have different policy preferences and act out of self interest representation of historically marginalized groups is a contentious contingent process that is likely to ebb and flow The book begins with a theoretical positioning of the meaning of women's interests issues and preferences It considers the need to add nuance to how we conceive of and study intersectionality and the dangers of stretching the meaning of substantive representation It then looks at descriptive representation in political parties high courts and legislatures as well as how definitions of interest affect who represents women in legislatures and social movements The book concludes by suggesting testable propositions and avenues for future research to enhance understanding about representation of women and of other historically under represented groups Chapters include cases from the United States Latin America Western Europe and Africa      Living Gender after

Communism Janet Elise Johnson, Jean C. Robinson, 2006-12-12 How has the collapse of communism across Europe and Eurasia changed gender In addition to acknowledging the huge costs that fell heavily on women Living Gender after Communism suggests that moving away from communism in Europe and Eurasia has provided an opportunity for gender to multiply from varieties of neo traditionalism to feminisms from overt negotiation of femininity to denials of gender This development in turn has enabled some women in the region to construct their own gendered identities for their own political economic or social purposes Beginning with an understanding of gender as both a society wide institution that regulates people's lives and a cultural toolkit which individuals and groups may use to subvert or transvalue the sex gender system the contributors to this volume provide detailed case studies from Belarus Bosnia the Czech Republic Poland Romania Russia and Ukraine This collaboration between young scholars most from postcommunist states and experts in the fields of gender studies and postcommunism combines intimate knowledge of the area with sophisticated gender analysis to examine just how much gender realities have shifted in the region Contributors are Anna Brzozowska Karen Dawisha Nanette Funk Ewa Grigar Azra Hromadzic Janet Elise Johnson Anne Marie Kramer Tania Rands Lyon Jean C Robinson Iulia Shevchenko Svitlana Taraban and Shannon Woodcock      Gender Justice, Citizenship & Development , Printbegr nsninger Der kan printes kapitelvís
